Knudsen Aide Here To Speed Defense Work

Conover and Tech Leader Study Problems of Training.

By DUDLEY GLASS.
Problems of how to speed up industry in all lines related to the national defense program were thrashed out for six hours yesterday at a conference held in the Henry Grady hotel.

Principal speaker was William Conover, a tall, upstanding young man with a pipe. He is—or was—an executive in United States Steel, but his salary has been cut—drastically. He is now a dollar-a-year man, working in Washington with William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman in the big national defense program set-up—the Office of Production Management.

Mr. Conover didn't go into labor problems or labor disputes. He talked about the necessity of training more men to tackle more jobs so they could turn out more planes or guns or road working machines in less time.

CONFERENCE—William Conover (left) an executive of United States Steel Corporation but now a dollar-a-year man with William S. Knudsen in the national defense program, and J. E. McDaniel, of Georgia Tech, were principal figures yesterday in an Atlanta conference on "Training Within Industry."

House Opens Debate on Two Pipe Line Bills

$275,000 in taxes from the railroads and that the pipe line would destroy the port of Brunswick and seriously impair the port of Savannah.

Representative Dawson Kea, of Laurens, got the debate off to a dramatic start by revealing the contents of the telegram from Ickes. It was in reply to a telegram Kea had dispatched to the President, following arguments in some quarters that the President had not had the Georgia pipe line in mind when he wrote his letter concerning their value to national defense.

Brief and to Point.
The telegram was brief and to the point. It said:

"Reference to President Roosevelt's letter January 23 to Chairman Lea, Southeastern pipe line is that referred to as under construction and Plantation pipe line is that on which commencement has been delayed."

The Plantation line, it was explained, begins in Baton Rouge, La., and would extend through Georgia to connect with the Southeastern line.

Speaks for Hour.
Holding the floor for a full hour, Representative Rees attacked the constitutionality of the pipe line bills and emphasized that the power of eminent domain should be jealously guarded.

Representative J. W. Culpepper, of Fayette, asked if it were not true that the oil interests were merely using the project from Port St. Joe, Fla., to Chattanooga, Tenn., as a "wedge" in anticipation of "taking charge of this state and laying their lines where they please."

Rees replied that this was his opinion.

Claims Tax Loss.
Representative Spence Grayson, of Chatham, who spoke against the measures, emphasized the tax losses he said Georgia would suffer if the bills passed.

He said the railroads paid to Georgia approximately $690,000 in taxes per year, a large part of this going to schools. He insisted the state would lose approximately $275,000 of this amount, as compared with the $34,000 to $35,000 it would gain from the pipe line. Grayson also argued construction of the line would seriously affect the state's annual rental of $540,000 from the W. & A. railroad, pointing out that the state-owned railway collected approximately $900,000 per year from hauling petroleum products.

He estimated approximately 1,500 railway employees, who receive an average salary of $1,800 per year, would be thrown out of jobs because of a 10 per cent cut in the revenue of the railroads.

Representative Frank Gross, of Stephens, said he was sold on the argument that the pipe line would release two-thirds of the steamers now used in transporting gasoline from Port Arthur, Texas.

Representative L. A. Whipple, of Bleckley, opened the arguments for the pipe line bills.

He said the transportation of gasoline in pipe lines was the most natural method, in addition to being safer and cheaper.

Representative R. E. Chastain, of Thomas, one of the authors of the bill, predicted the pipe line would mean cheaper gasoline.

Representative Joseph Blackshear, of Hall, warned against "granting the most sacred rights that can be given to anyone."

The oratory rolled on from 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning to 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, with an hour out for lunch.

Speaker Randall Evans Jr. asked all lobbyists to leave the floor at the outset of the debate, but had to repeat his warning several times during the day.

George Makes Fight To Limit Aid Bill Debate

lina, and Walsh, of Massachusetts—delivered themselves to equal verbosity today.

There is no question any longer about the defeatist tactics being employed by the opposition, but as Senator Tom Connally, Democrat of Texas, put it today, it is still "a gentleman's filibuster," in that for the most part the opponents are still talking about the bill.

This is usually the first stage of any senate filibuster. Opponents of legislation, who through lack of numbers seek to kill it today, by talking the measure to death, rather than risk a vote, first exhaust themselves on the subject matter. Then they hold the floor in time-killing debate by reading everything from a Sears-Roebuck catalog, Gibbon's Fall and Decline of Rome—anything to supply them with words.

Democrats Eged On.
If the filibuster hasn't yet reached this stage the implication of Senator Connally's appraisal of the present trend is that it will soon do so.

Senator George and Majority Leader Barkley are known to feel, however, that the suggested night sessions has the elements that may break the filibuster. It has usually worked this way in the past.

For one thing, senators, however charmed they may be with the sound of their own voices, don't like to be kept in the chamber at night. Neither do they like to talk to gallery girls which dull evening performances develop.

While cloture is always possible and may be invoked at will, actually there is such a strong tradition against it that it is seldom attempted. Moreover a two-thirds majority is required to impose this sort of limitation on debate.

Clark and Wheeler said they had not filibustered against the bill, but added that it was a measure of such great importance there should be no limitation of debate.

"I don't wonder that some of the proponents of this bill would like to see it jammed through at the earliest possible moment," Wheeler declared, "because they know as I do that when the people understand it there will be a tremendous uprising over the country against it."

"I expect to fight this legislation in any way, shape or form I can," Wheeler said many persons had written him urging that a filibuster be conducted. He said he believed they were "justified" in making such a request because, "no matter how much you sugarcoat this measure it is a dangerous thing to put on the statute books."

Cloture Suggested.
Earlier, Senator Glass, Democrat, Virginia had suggested that the senate impose cloture.

Wheeler declared he had read suggestions for cloture and added that they came "from senators who have spent very little time on the floor."

"If they would stay here and listen to the debate," he added, "there wouldn't be so much shouting about cloture."

Clark remarked that Senator Smathers, Democrat, New Jersey, who spoke in support of the bill today, had been on the floor infrequently. He quoted Smathers as saying that anyone could express his views on the legislation in 20 minutes and then added:

"After hearing the senator, I am satisfied that he could have expressed all the views he has with out addressing the senate at all."

On the Floor. Senator Walsh, Democrat, Massachusetts, denounced the bill as one committing the United States "to aid which involves actual war—not only material resources and financial resources, but the blood of our young men."

"If England is fighting our fight we belong in the war by her side," the Massachusetts senator declared. "What hypocrisy of those who insist that England is fighting our fight and yet insist that we shall give only limited aid—limited to measures short of war!"

"To my mind," Walsh declared at another point, "this bill approaches the recklessness, the daring, the insanity of one who tries to ride Niagara Falls in a rowboat."

Advocates of the bill, Walsh said, are "guided by their emotions rather than reason" and wish "to give America to save the world."

Report Is Cited.
After Walsh took his seat, George read to the chamber portions of a report which he said Walsh had made to the senate last May on behalf of the Naval Committee.

The report asserted among other things that defeat of the United States was possible by means of naval blockade at a distance without any military conquest of the continent.

Walsh said in reply that the report was designed to show the need for naval strength.

The report, he said, showed in danger only if she failed to that the United States would be strengthened her defenses. He cited an assertion that with "adequate sea power and air power the United States cannot be defeated."

Could Stop Invasion.
Walsh added that it was the opinion of naval experts that the nation had a fleet of sufficient strength to prevent an invasion and not to engage a hostile fleet at a great distance from American bases.

He declared that if the fleet were to engage the Japanese navy at a "reasonable distance from our shores," it would be able to "assume victory for the American people" but that "thousands of miles away, in the waters of Japan, the risk would be extreme."

As soon as Walsh had replied to Georgia, Senator Clark read from the legislation a forecast, cast by George on April 13, 1939, that "if we let Europe alone, there will be no war."

"I was mistaken then," George said, "and I'm perfectly willing to admit it. The trouble with the senator from Missouri is that he never admits when he is mistaken, although the balance of the world clearly recognizes it."

Walsh spoke before crowded galleries after Senators Smathers, Democrat, New Jersey, and Tamm, Democrat, Delaware, had voiced support of the bill. Senator Bridges, Republican, New Hampshire, another supporter of the measure, and Senator Reynolds, Democrat, North Carolina, an opponent, followed Walsh.

Tamm advocated the measure as one which would tend to keep war from American shores by weakening Germany. He said that those opposing the legislation "prefer to have their air, if one does occur in which the United States is directly interested, in the United States."

Formal Inquiry In Liner Crash To Begin Today

Rickenbacker Rallies in Oxygen Tent After Relapse.

Formal official inquiry into the crash last week of an Eastern Air Liner which brought death to seven persons and injury to nine will begin at 9 o'clock Thursday morning when a public hearing will be held at the old post office building, it was learned yesterday.

Meanwhile, Piedmont hospital reported yesterday a slight improvement was noted in the condition of Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, former World War ace and president of the air line, who is still battling gamely for his life in an oxygen tent.

The public hearing into cause of the crash is scheduled to be held in the courtroom used by District Judge Robert L. Russell, as saying that anyone could express his views on the legislation in 20 minutes and then added:

Lederer to Preside.
The hearing will be conducted by the Civil Aeronautics Board and will be presided over by Jerome Lederer, director of the CAB's safety bureau, and Grant Mason, a member of the board. Both are expected to arrive here tomorrow by plane from Washington.

Other officials who will participate will be Frank Caldwell, director of the CAB's investigation division; Robert W. Crisp, acting chief of the safety legal section of the board; E. M. Townsend, CAB investigator; Richard Roosevelt, traffic control supervisor of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, and James Douglas, CAB investigator.

Caldwell pointed out that the hearing is strictly "a fact-finding group" and is in "no way a prosecuting gathering." He said persons interested will have the right to submit questions in writing to the examiners.

Witnesses Called.
Among witnesses who will appear at the hearing are five or six persons who live in the vicinity where the crash occurred, near Morrow, Ga., and Candler airport attaches who were on duty at the time of the crash. Roosevelt, it was said, will represent the men who were on duty in the traffic control tower.

Depositions from four survivors of the crash will be introduced. In this connection, it was explained that the other survivors are not in well enough physical condition to tell their story.

Depositions were obtained from Roy B. Sewell, of Atlanta; George Feinberg, of New York, who was dismissed from Piedmont hospital and has returned to his home; Philip L. Brady, of New York, and Jesse Rosenfield, of New Orleans, who left the hospital the day following the crash.

A bulletin on Rickenbacker's condition issued by the hospital, said:

"His general condition is somewhat better, but he is still seriously sick and not out of danger. His temperature is 100, his pulse 110 and his blood pressure 120."

being made, looking toward future traffic developments.

Under the provisions of the amendments, Fulton and DeKalb counties must agree on the functioning of the highway authority.

The authority will be empowered to acquire land, to limit access to and from highways which it may designate as arterial highways, to provide for crossings, to open or close streets or highways and to acquire and develop property adjacent to the roads or highways.

No bonded indebtedness shall be incurred until the indebtedness represented by a particular series shall be submitted to the qualified voters of the two counties.

farmers parity income in the next two years.

He told the committee that he was not prepared to recommend a substitute for the present program but, upon request, he enumerated these three alternatives—price-fixing, parity loans, and a revised scheme based on the processing tax which the supreme court held unconstitutional.

He and his associates repeatedly told the committee that the government must continue to make large appropriations to bolster farm income unless a new program was devised, and contended such a step was all the more necessary because wars abroad had virtually closed foreign markets.

Milo Perkins, surplus marketing administrator, urged congress to extend the stamp plan to all sectors of the nation, saying:

"My own judgment is that since we are likely to hit an economic crackup somewhere in the 1940's, we need to work toward extending this program to every county in America. It would be national insurance against hunger as well as against low prices for commodities used largely here at home."

This Rickenbacker Is Tough! Eats Ham Under Oxygen Tent

By RALPH MCGILL.

"El Capitan" Eddie Rickenbacker is of the old school. His idea of food is something to eat; not a coddled egg, a wisp of vegetable, or a cup of broth. Something to eat is something you can put your teeth into.

For days now, doctors who have been watching at the bedside of this man, injured near to death in the crash of one of his own Eastern Air liners at midnight last Wednesday, trying to get him to relax, to rest and—above all—to eat.

Yesterday afternoon they came to him. He was rational, the occasional delirium having left him. He was in the oxygen tent placed about him early Sunday when he seemed to be dying.

"How am I," he asked.

"You are better, Eddie," said the doctor nearest him. "You are pretty sick but you are better. We want you to eat something."

"What's this thing over me?"

"Some of your ribs are broken, Eddie, and this oxygen tent makes it easier for you to breathe."

"That's all right."

"Now, Eddie, do you feel like eating something?"

"Yes," said the pilot who in 1917 shot down 22 German planes and four German balloons, "I do. I want a ham sandwich, an egg sandwich and a Coca-Cola."

The startled doctors looked at each other, their eyes bulging.

"Maybe a poached egg, Eddie, and a little milk."

"No," said the very sick man, "I want something to eat. I want a ham sandwich and an egg sandwich and a—"

"All right, Eddie," said a very wise doctor.

He knew that if the man WANTED something to eat, it was wisdom of the highest order, and also the very best of medicine, to give it to him.

So, the man who was nearly killed last Thursday morning, and who was near to dying on Sunday until they pulled him back with oxygen and a blood transfusion, ate a ham sandwich and an egg sandwich and drank his soft drink on Monday night.

Agriculture In Bad Shape, Tarver Says

Georgian Says Farmers Not Receiving Just Consideration.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS, Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Representative Malcolm Tarver, of Georgia, today stated that agriculture "is in a more serious condition than any other activity in our country," adding that it was not receiving just consideration in line with other industries in the defense program.

Speaking in behalf of the $890,000,000 agricultural appropriation bill for the 1942 fiscal year as it reached the floor of the house, Tarver, in charge of the bill as a member of the appropriations committee, said further:

"When all items, including re-appropriations, appropriations and loans, are taken into consideration the pending bill is still $56,406,552 below funds available for the present fiscal year, but $55,072,066 in excess of funds recommended for approval by the budget."

No Preference.
"In view of the fact that appropriations for other activities of the government, due to defense needs and other causes, are increasing by leaps and bounds the Georgian said, "it should be apparent to any fair-minded person that agriculture is certainly not receiving preferential consideration if the amounts recommended in this bill are appropriated by the congress."

Tarver said also that the committee report urges the agricultural department to study the work of its various research bureaus with the view of eliminating those "which have long since completed the useful purpose for which they were originally designed."

He explained that it is difficult for the committee to "obtain proper evidence upon which to base such a process of elimination."

Asks Consideration.
The Georgian's statement concluded with the recommendation that thorough consideration be given to the agricultural situation as a whole.

"A rearrangement of the whole structure of farm legislation is urgently necessary," Tarver stated. "Whether farm price fixing is the answer to the farmers' difficulties is at least open to question, and in my judgment it would not be a wise solution for their problems."

"However," he emphasized, "if the man who labors in industry is to be assured by law a minimum price for his labor, there certainly appears no reason based upon moral justice why the farmer should not have similar assurance as to the prices of his products which in the main represent his labor."

O'Neal's Attack Is Unfounded, Wickard Says

Secretary Denies Duplication in Department of Agriculture.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—(AP) Secretary of Agriculture Wickard told congress today that data in the hands of the department do not bear out the charge of "widespread duplication" of effort by agencies administering the farm program.

Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, had complained to the House Agriculture Committee that "duplication of effort and overlapping and even conflict" among various agencies meant "excessive costs and confusion and inconvenience to the farmer."

He recommended that administration of the AAA, the Soil Conservation Service, the Commodity Credit Corporation and the Surplus Marketing and Disposal Division be combined and that land-grant colleges and extension services be given more responsibility.

In reply, Wickard sent the committee a statement saying that duplication and conflict "actually are not important problems." He added that the Farm Bureau's proposals would bring greater overlapping.

Fifi-Kissed Soldier Ready 'To Get Hitler'

Vivacious Brunette Wants To Become Elsie Janis of 1941.

Fifi D'Orsay, high spirited brunette bombshell of stage and screen, wants to be the Elsie Janis of the Army camps of 1941.

"There's something about a soldier's uniform that hits me in the eye," Fifi o-o-la-lad here yesterday, "and I want to do my part for national defense by doing my bit to keep the boys happy."

She's spending every spare moment she can find giving benefit entertainments in Army camps for the soldiers and she thinks she's doing a good job. To prove it, she pulled out a telegram from one soldier boy.

Since she went on tour four months ago, Miss D'Orsay has sung and danced and otherwise entertained at service camps in Canada and the United States. She gets no money for these performances. She just "likes to entertain those boys."

"My ambition is to be the Elsie Janis of this war and I'm headed to become that if the boys will have me."

(Elsie Janis was the doughboy's No. 1 entertainer in the last war.) Fifi has a tender spot in her heart for all men in uniform. Her coat, just above the heart, is covered with regimental insignia obtained from soldiers in units for whom she has given benefit performances. One is from the famed Sixth Scotch-Canadian regiment. However, she can't wear that one. It looks so much like a policeman's badge.

And a tip to the boys at Fort McPherson. Miss D'Orsay would like to give a benefit performance at the post for you. All you have to do is ask her. She's going out to cheer up the veterans at Hospital No. 48 tomorrow.

Navy To Start Le Tourneau New Air Bases Speaks Here On British Soil To Ministers

8 Atlantic, Caribbean Sites Obtained in Deal for Destroyers.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—(AP) The Navy took steps today to set up skeleton air bases immediately in eight British colonies guarding the Atlantic and Caribbean approaches to this hemisphere. This action was a forerunner to an eventual $40,000,000 program for the development of more extensive and time-consuming naval aviation facilities in several of the key colonies. The right to lease base sites in the colonies was obtained by the United States at the time it transferred 50 destroyers to Britain.

The department announced a $1,004,000 contract for the purchase, assembly and fabrication of materials for naval air stations in all eight of the outposts. Officials said these materials would go into barracks, mess halls and seaplane ramps at Newfoundland, Bermuda, the Bahamas, Jamaica, Antigua, St. Lucia, Trinidad and British Guiana.

Christian Council Gets Reports on Revival Plan.

By DR. THOMAS M. ELLIOTT.
"The Lord Jehovah didn't call all of us to be preachers, as He wanted some of us to work for a living," facetiously said R. G. LeTourneau, president of the LeTourneau Foundation at Toccoa, as he addressed more than 200 ministers and laymen at the monthly meeting yesterday of the Atlanta Christian Council. When the applause had subsided, he further said, "Ministers should be sales managers, using laymen as sales demonstrators."

Dr. Ryland Knight, of the Second-Ponce de Leon Baptist church, presided over the session. Reports were submitted by all committees engaged in making preparations for the city-wide simultaneous revival campaign to be promoted by all evangelical churches in Atlanta during March and April. Dr. Paul Moody, of New York, will be the guest speaker for the April meeting of the council.

Detailed reports as to preparatory work for the revival were made. Graham Clark stated that Atlanta young people are in hearty co-operation with the effort, conducting classes in studies in evangelism. On Easter Sunday morning, at the sunrise service at Grant Field, 350 young people will form a Christian cross at the front of the stand, he said.

Dr. Daniel Poling, of New York, is to speak to a young people's mass meeting on April 20 at the First Baptist church, he said.

Dr. Robert Burns announced that arrangements had been made for the motion picture, "The King of Kings," to be shown at the Fox theater during pre-Easter week.

Charles Coates Loses Appeal For New Trial

Attorney Says He Will Carry Plea to State Supreme Court.

DALTON, Ga., March 3.—(AP) Charles Coates, sentenced to die for the fatal shooting of Georgia Highway Patrolman W. F. Black lost an appeal for a new trial today.

Superior Judge John C. Mitchell denied the plea after Coates' attorney, Joe Turner, of Atlanta, placed a three-point argument before the court. The attorney said he would appeal to the state supreme court for a new trial.

Coates was sentenced to die on March 7, but an appeal would automatically delay imposition of the penalty.

Turner contended that the court's jury charge was "highly prejudicial" and that "there was no evidence of a confession, that it erred in overruling an objection to allowing a witness to testify in rebuttal and that the charge as to the credibility of witnesses was 'an invasion of the right and prerogative of the jury' to weigh the testimony."

Black was killed on the night of December 20 near Ringgold, Ga., and Coates was captured following a five-day manhunt.

Order Sought Forcing Sheriff To Take Fine

Pardon Holder Takes Steps To Avoid Serving Sentence.

Action seeking to force Sheriff J. C. (Mott) Aldredge to accept a fine upon which a pardon from Governor Rivers was conditioned, was sought yesterday in Fulton superior court by attorneys for Marie Allman, who was pardoned of a lottery conviction shortly before Rivers left office.

At the same time, two habeas corpus petitions brought by Mary Johnson and Tony Pappas were set for hearing at 2 o'clock this afternoon before Judge Hugh M. Dorsey.

These developments came as the result of the campaign of Criminal Court Solicitor Bond Almond to force convicted lottery racketeers to serve their original sentences when they failed to comply in a reasonable time with the provisions of conditional pardons granted during the last months of Governor Rivers administration.

Rachmaninoff Ill, Cancels Concert Here

Pianist Rudolf Serkin To Appear April 8 Instead.

Sergei Rachmaninoff, the pianist-composer who was scheduled to give a concert at the auditorium tonight, is ill and his doctor has given orders for him not to play again this season. Consequently tonight's engagement had to be canceled.

Marvin McDonald, manager of the All-Star Concert Series, has completed arrangements to present Rudolf Serkin, sensational Bohemian pianist who is recognized as one of the greatest pianists of the age, as a substitute for Rachmaninoff. Serkin will play here on Tuesday night, April 8. Tickets sold for the Rachmaninoff concert will be honored at Serkin's recital, and no exchange will be necessary.

Serkin's standing as a topflight virtuoso became evident to the public when he made a sensationally successful debut with Toscanini and the New York Philharmonic Orchestra in 1937. He had been famous before that for his recorded music, and as a concert artist throughout Europe.

Serkin is the son-in-law of the great violinist, Adolf Busch, and he and Busch often have appeared together in sonata recitals. In addition to his widespread concert activities, Serkin is a member of the faculty of the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia.

Casket Is Found Floating in River

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. CARROLLTON, Ga., March 3.—A six-foot, newly made casket found floating yesterday near Bethlehem church, a quarter-mile above a bridge across the Little Tallapoosa river near Bowdon, sent Sheriff E. B. Kilgore and Deputy Russell Lambert on a rush river-dragging job to determine if the gruesome container had been tenanted by the quick or the dead.

Lambert said one side of the casket had been unscrewed, and the screws on the other side loosened, and was undoubtedly "home-made" although unusually well constructed. A carpenter's penciled measurements on the bottom indicated newness.

A group of fishermen first discovered the casket, but could find no indications in the Bethlehem graveyard where ghouls might have operated, nor were there such evidences in other nearby cemeteries.

He was a member of the Smyrna Baptist church, the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and the Nelms Masonic Lodge of Smyrna. In addition to his wife, he is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Pauline Dunn and Mrs. J. H. McClung, both of Atlanta, and three sons, Edgar, of Atlanta, and B. H. and J. E. Brinkley, of Smyrna. Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. Wednesday at Smyrna Baptist church, with the Rev. E. B. Awtry and Dr. George Brown officiating. Burial will be in Smyrna City cemetery, with T. M. Blanchards in charge.

CONCERTIST — Rudolf Serkin, who will appear here in concert in April.

CANCELS — Sergei Rachmaninoff, pianist, who cancelled his concert.

Mayor Brinkley, Of Smyrna, Dies

P. F. Brinkley, 72, mayor of Smyrna, died at an Atlanta hospital yesterday afternoon following a brief illness.

Mr. Brinkley, who assumed the office of mayor in early January, was a retired yard conductor of the Southern Railway.

He was a member of the Smyrna Baptist church, the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and the Nelms Masonic Lodge of Smyrna.

In addition to his wife, he is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Pauline Dunn and Mrs. J. H. McClung, both of Atlanta, and three sons, Edgar, of Atlanta, and B. H. and J. E. Brinkley, of Smyrna.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. Wednesday at Smyrna Baptist church, with the Rev. E. B. Awtry and Dr. George Brown officiating. Burial will be in Smyrna City cemetery, with T. M. Blanchards in charge.

Georgia Power Denies Rates Are Excessive

Tarver Charges Customers Pay Twice as Much as TVA Charges.

Charges made yesterday in Washington that residents of north Georgia served by the Georgia Power Company are paying twice as much for their power as those served by the Tennessee Valley Authority were denied last night by the Georgia Power Company.

The published charges quoted Representative Malcolm Tarver as saying: "Recently an agreement has been entered into between the North Georgia Electric Membership Corporation (supplied by the TVA) and the Georgia Power Company, with the approval of REA, under which the former co-operative has agreed not to furnish TVA power farther south than it is now serving.

"The effect of this agreement is to leave the southern end of my district, although it is within from 60 to 125 miles of Chickamauga dam, to be served through current originating with the Georgia Power Company.

"The people in the southern part of my district are paying twice as much for power as the people in the northern part, and moreover, they are being denied service from the co-operative that gets its power from the Tennessee Valley Authority, because of this agreement with the Georgia Power Company."

Tarver then charged that the N. G. E. M. C. pays the TVA .58 of a cent per kilowatt hour, while a co-operative in the southern part of his district — the Cobb County Electric Membership Corporation, pays the Georgia Power Company approximately twice that amount.

Answering the charges, the power company set forth its published rates, which, for average general usage, are approximately the same as those of the north Georgia co-operative, which operates with TVA power. The rates for 100 kilowatt hours—the average residential consumption—were identical, $3.50.

The Cobb County Co-operative Association, whose rates Tarver charged were higher than the northern co-operative's, buys its power from the city of Marietta, the power company reported. The power company does not establish that rate, although it sells power to Marietta.

The agreement referred to by the congressman was made in 1939, a Georgia Power Company spokesman said, with full consent of the authorities and with no attempt at secrecy.

Plan Advanced For Completion Of Memorial

Williams Would Put Stone Mountain Under Parks Authority.

The question of what to do about the uncompleted scar on the face of Stone Mountain has been as hard a nut to crack as the granite rock itself, but Representative Jack Williams, of Waycross, is attempting it in a bill he introduced yesterday in the lower house.

His solution is a new State Parks Authority that would put the Stone Mountain memorial to the Confederacy and all other similar projects approved in the future on a self-liquidating footing.

Bond issues would be sold, under direction of a five-man parks board appointed by the Governor, and the proceeds used to finish the famous carving. After that the state could sell tickets to see the monument and thus retire the bond issue.

Although the Williams bill would apply also to any present state park and any future development, it mentions the Stone Mountain memorial by name.

"The word 'project' shall be deemed to include the completion of the Confederate Memorial on the side of Stone Mountain and the operation of the same together with such land adjacent thereto as may be required by the authority and housing accommodations, utilities and other facilities as may be placed on the land by the authority as a park, or recreation area."

Efforts by private individuals and local individuals to finish the monument have always been balked by the owners of the Stone Mountain property refusing to sell the land at an agreeable figure. By mentioning it in a state parks authority, the state could condemn the property by eminent domain and take it over.

To give employment and to get employment . . . a Want Ad in The Constitution is equally effective in both cases.

Georgia Tech Resolves

Of far greater significance than its limited scope is the news that Georgia Tech students, polled by the student newspaper, have voted overwhelmingly in favor of going to war if Britain is in peril of falling. For it is upon the wills and the hearts of these young men and of thousands more like them that in its final analysis the future of our democracy may rest. Too often the sympathies of the nation as a whole are not those of the people most personally involved in a crisis; in this case the questions were put to a body of young men who may themselves some day be in the front of the battle line. And their hearts and their minds are solidly behind the national loathing of Nazism, are, in fact, even more decided in that loathing.

For so many years indoctrinated with a spirit of cynicism about the purposes and the results of the last war, college men might understandably today still move in the years that saw them organize into veterans of future wars, ridicule the motives of patriots, despise military training, quote freely from "Arms and the Man," organize peace parades, and refer to the last war as one which "made the world safe for Wall Street." These things they did in the blessed years before Hitler blasted so many of our illusions.

Appalling is the knowledge today that, in many ways, the fate of England lies in the steady hands and keen eyes of men between 18 and 25, those darlings of reckless courage who daily fling themselves across the skies, guard the stormy seas, and watch the hills for the first signs of the scourge from across the waters.

So it will be with America should our peril become reality.

In this poll in which Georgia Tech students voted 3 to 1 in favor of giving England supplies of war, 24 to 1 for selling supplies to Britain, 3 to 1 for America's entering the war if it appears that Britain will fall, and 6 to 4 for entering the war to destroy Hitler whether England fall or no, there is encouraging thought. Duke University students and the University of North Carolina students have given similar evidence, if not so pointed, that the spirit of America's fighting young manhood is strong and resolute.

So long as the United States may call upon men like these to defend the right to be free, we need not fear the future of our democracy. These men, trained for a world at peace, devoutly desire peace, but more devoutly they desire a world in which parliamentary government, freedom of worship, a free press and radio, the right to work or not to work, labor unions, free schools and universities are living realities and not the object of a dictator's lust. In such a world they intend to live, intend with all their hearts and souls.

And, by God's grace, in such a world they shall live!

Not Asleep

With Winston Churchill at the helm it would be foolish to assume that the Germans are going to have things all their own way in the new situation fast developing in the Balkans. In fact, the element of surprise, so important in modern warfare, will probably be on the side of Britain and her allies before many more days, perhaps hours, have passed.

Reports are already current in Italy that the British have transported large numbers of troops and great quantities of equipment to Salonika, Greek port which will, in all probability, be the key position on the new arena of war in eastern Greece.

Already the R. A. F. is said to have severely bombed Rumanian oil fields.

Sir Anthony Eden and General Dill, chief of staff for the British army, have not spent their time in Istanbul and Athens in idle gossip over the tea cups.

At the moment this is written German legions are pouring through Bulgaria to the Greek frontier. Unless the Churchill of old has completely lost his punch, they are apt to find an unpleasant surprise awaiting them, very soon.

Placing the Blame

There are, on the opposite page to this, two letters, one from the principal of the Boys' High school, Professor H. O. Smith, and one from a student at that institution, Dan Bailey.

Both deal with recent charges, made by visitors to the school, that conditions in the cafeteria are undesirable and that there are obscene writing and pictures on the toilet room walls. Both, from different approaches, place the blame for whatever truth there may be in these charges at the door of the people of Atlanta, who have failed, for many years, to provide a proper building for the school.

The student states, unequivocally, that the trouble arises from the fact that students have to go to their classes in old, wooden portables.

Principal Smith declares that any litter on the floor of the cafeteria is there because it is so badly overcrowded that boys naturally drop their luncheon wrappings and other waste upon the floor instead of making the difficult struggle to reach a receptacle. Young Bailey likewise points to the fact that the cafeteria is entirely too small and insufficiently equipped to serve 1,400 boys.

As to obscenity on toilet room walls, Principal Smith declares this is true only in a remote, discarded building, where the toilet is open for participants in WPA recreational projects, and thus is used more by outsiders than by the students themselves.

Both are, of course, largely correct in their argument as to the inadequacy of the building equipment. It might be pointed out to Bailey, the student, that to be worthy of a finer building boys should first demonstrate their desire to take best possible care of what they have. However, he is correct, in large degree, in attributing conditions to lack of pride, on the part of the boys, in buildings which are, actually, nothing but a disgrace to a city such as Atlanta.

That the school has done splendid work and has turned out graduates who have, class after class, been a high credit to the city, cannot be denied. That administration and faculty have been able to achieve the record they have is all the more remarkable considering the physical handicaps under which their work is done.

After all, the criticism at worst was but on minor features and these faded into insignificance before the failure of the city to decently house a group of youths which, after all is said and done, is a selected contingent of the boyhood of the community. The cost to Atlanta, in injury to the health of students exposed to excessive cold in winter and unreasonable heat in fall and spring, in handicap to their studies and in discouragement to ambitious young people, is immeasurably greater than the cost of an adequate and worthy building for the school.

Until such a building is erected and the ramshackle, drab and unhealthy portables are forever discarded, criticism of unavoidable conditions had better be held in abeyance and praise for splendid work under unfair handicap given instead.

Five Wise Steps

The executive board of the Georgia Federation of Labor adopted five recommendations for the policy of labor unions in connection with defense projects. At the same time the board announced that a careful survey of all charges had failed to uncover "a single instance of racketeering or dishonesty by any of the unions involved in the national defense program."

It is to be presumed the survey referred to covered only the state of Georgia, inasmuch as it was a Georgia labor organization which made the statement. There is no definite evidence to the contrary in this state, though in some other parts of the nation there can be no reasonable doubt that racketeering has occurred in the name of organized labor, at least.

The five recommendations are, undoubtedly, wise steps for organized labor to take if it is to retain the respect and confidence of the public. The five recommendations include that no local union charge greater initiation fees for defense jobs than were in effect July 1, last year; that all non-union workers on defense projects be given a 10-day trial period, without dues or initiation, in order to prove their skill and accumulate cash for the fees; that workers who have paid part of their initiation fee be given full credit for that payment when transferred to another local of the same craft; that each local appoint representatives to co-operate in investigating complaints of racketeering and unfair practices by unions and that defense project unions make agreement with employers to submit all grievances first to conference and then to outside arbitration.

Excellent recommendations which should be adopted nationally for the good of labor and of the nation and for the acceleration of the emergency defense program.

The vagueness of the Turk over his Bulgarian treaty brings to mind the old Columbia Wheel comic who, having tried his bogus French on Fifi with favorable results, remarked, "I wonder what I said."

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

PORTRAIT OF A FILIBUSTER WASHINGTON, March 3. It is now clear that the leaders of the opposition have organized a filibuster against the lease-lend bill. Poor management of the administration forces in the senate, due largely to the prolonged illness of Senator Walter F. George, has given the opposition a tempting chance. They are now delaying the final vote for a week or ten days in the hope that by hammering on the nerves of the senatorial wabblers and the public they will finally obtain a response.

The members of one of the supreme deliberative bodies of a great nation talking in such a manner, while the flames of world conflagration lick everywhere the society they live in, present a spectacle in the last degree curious. To the imaginative visitor to the senate galleries, the world outside, where brave peoples fight for freedom, and the chance of a day's battle may mean victory for tyranny or liberty, seems always to press in on the debate. But this seeming can only be produced by the exercise of the imagination, for rumors of the world outside rarely penetrate to the senate chamber.

SCENES IN THE SENATE On last Friday the scene in the senate chamber was particularly striking. The opposition's chosen chieftain, Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, had the floor to discuss the bill's legal aspects and particularly its delegations of power. Wheeler is a brilliant legislative combater, an eminent success in the senate, a bitter, unforgiving enemy of the President's, and the opposition spokesman who commands the widest audience. Logically, the mere fact that Wheeler was on his feet should have created a certain dramatic tension. Yet what made the scene striking was just the absence of any tension at all.

The setting was as usual. The large, putty-colored senate chamber, painted with meaningless mid-Victorian decorations, wore its usual appearance of comfortable shabbiness, of the kind of ease that goes with heavy old chairs, green carpets and a few brass spittoons. The galleries, as usual, were crowded with sight-seers, and below, at their desks on the floor, were the senators, looking as usual like a haphazard collection of rather ordinary, rather elderly American men, and paying their usual very intermittent attention to the proceedings.

Wheeler himself, a tall, gangling man with a big, powerful head, thin, trailing hair and steel spectacles that somehow give him a menacing expression, paced up and down, reading his speech with gestures, by his desk at the front of the chamber. The speech was more copious than stirring and, while Wheeler intoned his prepared paragraphs, comparatively few senators—the majority and minority leaders, bumbling Barkley and shrewd McNary, the bill's official manager, George, and a faithful little band of isolationists—remained for a question, and real debate started, senators hurried in to see the fun.

HITLER'S SAYINGS The fun, one might have anticipated, would be serious discussion of the terrible choices that now confront this country. It was seldom anything of the sort. Feeling has hardened in the senate in these last weeks and a good deal of the time the form of sharp personal exchanges. Once Lucas of Illinois, rose to argue with Wheeler, for example, and was immediately taunted with the character of the Chicago convention. "The senators know," Wheeler shouted, "who put the fellow down below in the dumps, the garbage, the sewer inspector." And Lucas, nettled, shot back, "The senator from Montana seems to know more about garbage than I do."

The best fun of all was the altercation between Wheeler and George, when the charge of filibustering was openly made. Wheeler found some particularly portentous implications in George's bill. George, neat, bankerish and usually polite in an elaborate, old southern way, rose to deny Wheeler's aspersions. Wheeler snapped at him, "I have the floor." George replied, "You've had the floor for the best part of two weeks." Wheeler remarked challengingly that he could have it for two weeks more if he wanted, and George snapped back, "Then it's a filibuster." Seeing that the two men, both snappy, both with long records of public service, standing on the floor playing "You're another," gave the galleries great pleasure.

But mostly these episodes were rambling and diffuse. Connally, the Jewish Texas senator who makes a specialty of opposition baiting, would ask Wheeler to explain his meaning. And Wheeler, who speaks ramblingly except from a prepared manuscript, would answer with a long flow of words of which the following is a verbatim sample:

"What I mean to say that this bill does, under the title, as I pointed out already, and the name of defense outside of the bill... what it does is this, it gives, as I shall point out a little later... I do not care to take up the time now... it gives the President more power than any President of the United States has ever had in peacetime... and more power, in my judgment, than any President of the United States ought to have in representative government. That is what I said... the language speaks for itself."

Of course, verbatim quotations from any orator sound a little like the writings of the stream-of-consciousness school. Yet to those who remembered the world outside, seemed insolubly puzzling until the strange moment when Chandler, of Kentucky, quoted Hitler's "Mein Kampf" to the speaker. Then Wheeler replied, with an illuminating note of something like pride, "The senator is more familiar with Hitler's books and Hitler's sayings probably than I am."

Significant Communications

All sorts and types of letters come to the desk of a newspaper editor. You read many of them, published in the column, "Pulse of the People." Others, for one reason or another, are not published.

The primary reason why some letters are discarded is lack of space. If we published every one it would take several full pages, with no advertising matter, every day. And we simply cannot afford that.

Some letters are too long—and we of course have no room for them. Don't want to hurt the writer's feelings. So they, too, go into the waste basket.

Some are written in such poor handwriting that it is difficult to decipher them. Some, it is impudently and inhumanly punishment either on our own eyes or on the eyes of the linotype operators. Too, when the writing is awfully bad, there is always the danger of misreading word, or phrase, and thus saying what the writer did not intend.

And there are some letters which evidence such abnormality of mind on the part of the writers that it would be cruel to expose them to the light of publication, thus revealing the weirdness of thought to the neighbors.

And, of course, there are anonymous letters which promptly go to the waste basket. Unread, 99 times out of a hundred.

But, of recent weeks, there has been something strangely significant about one of these groups of letter writers. I want to tell you about it.

The Wild Half Dozen.

There are four or five or six writers who have, in the past, sent wild diatribes openly praising Hitler and the Nazi idea, expressing vigorous hope that he completely smashes Britain and, even, adding the wish that he will successfully come to this side of the Atlantic and establish his own democracy and establish in its place an iron handed, regimented rule identical with that now in force in the occupied European countries. Some of them even write letters to see the day when the firing squad will be a routine feature of American life, just as it is today in Poland.

Unbelievable, isn't it? But I give you my word it is true.

We don't publish such letters. But have a special method of disposing of them, not to be mentioned here.

Of course, I become familiar with the handwriting and the signatures of such crazy letter writers. Recognize their reiterated outpourings of imbecility.

And a strange thing has happened in the past two weeks. Those same writers, admirers and well-wishers of Hitler and his Nazis, are now writing on a different theme. They are advocating defeat of the lease-lend bill!

To all of us who know it is somewhat of a surprise that enactment of this bill will be one of the most severe blows Hitler has yet received. It is also apparent that, by thus strengthening Britain, the bill offers the best available means of keeping this country out of active participation in the war. Admittedly, it may not do this. But one thing is sure, if we do not pass it, our chances of getting in the war will be much greater.

Apparently there are some who cannot see this fact which is so plain. Including the oppositionists and obstructionists in the senate. But, from the letters to which I refer, it is evident that some of the opposition to the bill, at least, emanates from the funny fringe of folks who want to see Hitler win and dominate the world.

Undoubtedly, if Hitler were able to make direct contact with the American people he would support the opponents to the bill. Equally beyond doubt, there are many of his agents now in this country, most of them posing as good American citizens, who are doing his work for him.

And there are, too, these fanatic ones, the letter writers who, either from insanity or sheer individual evil, are working for him, likewise.

It struck me as of pertinent significance, this unanimity of thought anent the lease-lend bill, among the Hitler admirers.

Morning Amusement.

It is always refreshing to find a new form of occupation for the drive to the office of a morning, and the drive back home in the evening.

Son and I come to town together. In the family bus. So Monday morning, we devised a new game. We counted the cars still carrying 1940 license tags we could see.

On the way from Decatur to the office, via Ponce de Leon, Courtland, Houston and Peachtree, we counted 74, on Monday. Wonder by how many it will be reduced (?) by Tuesday.

Incidentally, it was so intriguing we forgot our social pastime of comparing the times

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PFGLER.

Loved Trouble NEW YORK, March 3.—Walter O'Hara was killed in a head-on automobile smash at Taunton, Mass., Friday. It was his love of trouble which, back in the fall of 1937, cost him a job with a fabulous income as the boss of the Narragansett horse yard at Pawtucket, R. I., and revealed to the people of the state the fact that this legalized gambling joint had serious designs on the state government. O'Hara flatly said he was the boss of the state government, and calmly threatened to call the legislature into special session and impeach Robert Quinn, the governor, for interfering with his management of the racing plant. He said he owned two-thirds of the legislature.

Quinn finally won out by calling troops to police the track which was placed under martial law and closed in a silly but alarming travesty on American government. The track lost the revenue of its fall racing season and, eventually, O'Hara was forced to leave his job which paid him $75,000 a year in salary and expense allowance, alone. His income was augmented by dividends on his stock in the plant, which enjoyed a legal rake-off of 6-1-2 per cent of the net turnover plus breakage of penny-money, and the income from the parking and restaurant concessions and other incidental businesses.

O'Hara needn't have lost his job. His trouble was that he loved trouble and would leave the safe side of the road to seek it.

Success Was Dull

He was doing very well at Narragansett, but very well wasn't enough. Success was dull without trouble, so he went into politics and began to attack his political enemies and boasted of his contribution to the campaign funds of public officers. Finally, one day, in print, he called Governor Quinn a swarthy liar, and the Governor, not apparently holding this to be less majestic, called 300 young men away from their jobs and their classes in school to take the field in a military expedition against O'Hara. The force soon was reduced to 50 men, but they held the occupied zone in a solemn fashion, and the vehicles and arms of war were arrayed on the premises while the horsemen, touts, mutual clerks and gamblers moaned the dismal days away.

Up to that time, in less than four years, the track had handled more than $100,000,000, which meant that the owners, including O'Hara, had received as their share more than $6,500,000 on an original investment of considerably less than $2,000,000. It was the greatest gambling concern in all the world, but O'Hara found life dull without a little trouble, so he stirred up some just for fun.

Power of Patronage

His revenues were so great that he could swing elections, and his patronage, in the form of jobs at the track, gave him a strong political machine in a small, compact state. He had a penthouse on the roof of the grandstand, which, to his mind, was the actual state capital, and the mayor of Pawtucket, Tom McCoy, was his buddy and sat in with him during the sad days of beleaguering, playing cribbage with the boys and telling them what he and Walter were going to do to Governor Quinn. O'Hara said he had elected Mr. Quinn, personally, and he regarded Mr. Quinn's conduct not merely as ingratitude but as indiscipline.

The whole of Pawtucket was O'Hara's in the political sense, and reporters who disparaged Walter were barred from the city hall.

The people of Rhode Island had unwittingly given O'Hara this power by ratifying racing and granting him this monopoly for the sake of a little revenue to relieve their tax burden. Thus they delivered their government into the hands of a mischievous and hilarious adventurer who then frankly threatened to throw Mr. Quinn out and replace him with a man acceptable to the track.

There are going to be traffic troubles yonder when Walter O'Hara the gentleman of the cloud, Bishop, king or angel, he will slam right into their clouds and knock them looping, because he just won't give over for anybody.

Chinese Buy Bonds.

In the first 11 months of the Chungking government's National Reconstruction Savings Movement $50,000,000 worth of National Reconstruction Savings bonds were bought by Chinese both in China and abroad. Other deposits in Chinese banks, which now maintain branches even in small villages, also increased. Chungking leaders declare this strong indication of faith in the nation's new "savings network" proves that China can advance toward her goal of national reconstruction by her own strength.

given by the various clocks we pass en route.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Saturday, March 4, 1916:

"Before a crowd of about 500 people, Guyton Borgum, noted sculptor, who has been engaged to make Stone Mountain into a memorial of the confederacy, told of his plans for the work at the Decatur Board of Trade last night."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From the news columns of Wednesday, March 4, 1891:

"Mr. Josiah McCord captured a large king snake on the streets of Covington last week. It has been sent to the museum of the state agricultural department of Michigan."

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

PUBLIC REACTION Atlanta's plane crash, in which seven persons lost their lives and others seriously were hurt, caused hardly a ripple on the surface of plane travel.

There were a few cancellations. Business was normal. A few of those who saw the twisted, broken body of the plane and the dead about it, may not risk a flight.

Most of those looking at the crash and its victims were of the same philosophy of one of the pilots from another line who looked at the pilot and co-pilot of the line, dead, and said: "It could have happened in an automobile wreck."

It could have. The best story came from New York, where Mrs. Roosevelt boarded a plane for Washington the day after the accident near Atlanta. A man was at the desk canceling his flight on the same plane when he saw Mrs. Roosevelt go on out to the plane. "Am I a man or a mouse?" he said to the man at the desk. "Give me the ticket."

A check-up of all airlines reveals no effect of the wreck on traffic. Two of those in the wreck here continued their journey by plane. The reaction of the public was negative. It neither decreased nor increased plane traffic.

The facts are the world is going to fly. In steadily increasing numbers, the world is going to fly. The thunder of wings, the incredible fact of flight, will grow and grow. New inventions will make planes safer. Fog will be conquered. The very fact that this wreck occurred near Atlanta will increase the safety factors.

The fact that four people escaped from this terrific crash uninjured, except for lacerations and shock, is a tribute to the construction of the plane. Seeing it, as we saw it at dawn, one could not believe any person could emerge from it alive.

SWIFT PROGRESS Air travel has made more progress in portation within the same space of time.

The wooden coaches of railroads and the tragedies they contributed are a part of our history. The steel railroad car was many, many years in appearing on the tracks of the nation. Railroad travel is safe today, as is air travel, because safety was made the chief effort of the men directing it.

The crash of last week will make for safer travel because it will focus more attention on the fact that the man in the control tower is as important as the pilot.

It is doubtful if the investigation will discover the cause of the accident. No one will know why the pilot believed he had enough altitude until he was, according to the latest evidence, flying but a few feet off the ground.

Flying through fog, rain and darkness, he could not see. He was on his directional beam, which is the radio signal sent in that one direction. That beam "swings" in some sections where there are magnetic influences, but near Atlanta it is stable.

Something caused him to believe he could let down his plane for the landing approach at the field where he had a "ceiling" of 300 feet.

The crash brings forcibly to mind, too, how much we live by machines and how much dependency we put in them. Since we do, we will make them safer.

New inventions, new controls, will come from this crash to make air travel safer than it is. And air travel already is astonishingly, and comfortingly, safe.

The world is going to keep on flying. There will be more and more passengers carried this year. And as more and more passengers are carried, there will be more and more ways found to increase the safety factor.

THE ATLANTA AIRPORT There is another factor to be considered. Had the Atlanta airport been larger, the plane could have come in without trouble with a ceiling of 300 feet.

We long have known that the Atlanta airport is too small. We have been very slow to enlarge it.

The airplanes will grow larger. They will require more space. This country gave away millions of acres to assist the railroads to establish themselves. The city which does not assist the inevitable future of the airplane will find itself suffering in the future, as suffered those cities which ignored the development of the railroad.

When New York built its gigantic LaGuardia field, Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, now making a gallant fight for life in an Atlanta hospital, put into the cornerstone a signed statement predicting the airport would be inadequate within ten years, probably less.

Within a year the airport was too crowded. Plans already are under way to enlarge it.

If there is not room enough at Candler Field; if property is going to cost too much, then search ought to begin for another site. If this one can be enlarged so that runways of 6,000 feet and adequate approach space may be had, then the work ought to be rushed.

Within another 20 years we will be wondering how we ever flew in the planes of today. Just as today we wonder how men ever trusted the planes of the World War period in 1917 and the early commercial planes of the early 1920's.

The airplane, the personnel, the airport, all will become safer and surer as the years go on. It is important to keep pace with the airplane. The world will continue to take on wings.

When a Liberator Overcomes a Tyrant, Little Men Merely Get a New Master

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

Mr. Dooley, popular wit and philosopher of another generation, once voiced the sad and cynical truth that the Supreme Court reads the election returns.

It shouldn't be true, but it is. Youngsters once were taught to regard the Court as an almost god-like body, above all human passions and weaknesses, reviewing laws with impartial justice, and without other purpose or concern than to prevent any statutory violation of the sacred Constitution.

But the Court was never that. Even in John Marshall's time it was an instrument of political power, and it is such today. It changes with the changing winds of majority opinion. It "interprets" the Constitution to please and placate the party in power. During the long years when conservative Republicans ruled the land, the Court was conservative; when long-continued hard times made the majority liberal, the Court became liberal.

A few days ago the Supreme Court did what a liberal party and President and Congress had not dared to do. It legislated for the protection of organized labor. It ruled that labor is exempt from prosecution under anti-trust laws, even though its disputes operate directly in restraint of trade. It made labor, with a capital "L," a sacred cow in a land that hates special privilege.

Does this mean the working man is at last freed from exploitation? Alas, no. If it meant that, and that only, all lovers of justice and fair play to underdogs could rejoice in the victory of right over might.

But the sacred cows, in practice, will be labor bosses. Their power to frighten politicians will be magnified. They will be free to exploit working men as never before.

Common laborers are now charged as much as $50 for the right to work on defense projects, though the "union" that takes their money has never held a convention and the men who control it are not accountable to anybody.

Neither workers nor politicians have ever dared to make war on the labor racketeers, and now they will be even more fearful of antagonizing them.

Labor is in the saddle, but labor bosses hold the reins—and the whip.

Discovers "Ain't" Ain't Wrong and Rejoices at News

English professor—or professor of English—in Michigan declares that "ain't" is a perfectly good word, according to American usage, and if it ain't in the big dictionaries it ought to be.

Which relieves my mind almost as much as Emily Post's edict that one can slice his lettuce with a knife without committing a misdemeanor.

"Ain't" is easy and convenient. It flows rippling off the tongue I can imagine no one, in heat of argument, slowing up to say "is not" nor "are not." Not if he had been "bawled and raised" down south. Besides, "ain't" serves equally as well for singular or plural.

The English—in literature, at least—have a word spelled "arnt" which doesn't seem to fill any useful place in civilization.

Which reminds me, Dr. Louie

Newton—or our proofreaders (which gives me an out) pulled a criminal error a few days ago. In his column Louie wrote of "poet laureates."

The plural, Doctor, is "poets laureate."

How do I know so darn much? Because I heard that one on a radio quiz program only last week. Listen and learn. How many names of state capitals begin with "M"?

Oh, shucks! I've forgotten the answer to that one myself.

President's Pup

Whether you like Roosevelt, the New Deal and third term or not you'll have to admit that FDR—he's created so many "run-in" initials that he might as well have his own—a human kind of guy. I learned that years ago, down at Warm Springs, when he was merely a private citizen with a big idea.

I'm thinking about his new dog, Fala, a Scottie. I never owned a Scottie, but there's one next door who uses our shrubbery when occasion demands and he's a honey.

Fala, it seems, attends all press conferences, I think even sits in on intimate sessions with ambassadors and what not. And never tells anything. It's all off the record with Fala.

I like a President who likes a dog and likes to have the dog under his feet. Could you imagine George Washington or Benjamin J. Harrison or—if you want to get modern—Calvin Coolidge—petting a pup while discussing international problems. Lincoln used to crack jokes—to the disgust of some critics. I think if Lincoln had owned a good dog he'd have had him right in on the rug. Probably a flop-eared hound.

Kirk Simpson, the Associated Press man who has known so many presidents, told over at Athens last week about Roosevelt's ability to relax. I think perhaps Fala helps. Sometimes, perhaps, somebody fires at you a question you don't like to answer off-hand. To reach down and pet a dog and scratch him under the chin provides a moment for thought.

I'm glad the President has Fala as one of his personal staff. I like Fala much better than a number of Mr. Roosevelt's former intimates and advisers.

Bread on Waters

Does politeness pay? Sometimes! Friend of mine went out to the Erlanger last week to see if he could get two seats for "Hellzapoppin'." He was hoping against hope, for he'd heard it was "sold solid." And it was.

A dozen white folk were in the box office line, arguing or begging, or something.

Just outside the line stood a Negro boy, hesitating to horn in among the white folks.

My friend suggested to the boy that he step in, as he'd been waiting a long time. And then he stepped in behind the boy.

"My boss," said the young Negro, "says he can't come to the show and will you take these tickets back?"

Mrs. Freeman, the harassed box office attendant, didn't have a chance to say yes or no. My friend reached for the tickets—and forked over the cash. I hope he got his money's worth—because he gave a timid Negro boy a break.

Twenty-five years ago, according to the Tifton Gazette, "fashionable young ladies in Atlanta were carrying as accessories to their outfits the 'billy doll'."

I can recall the teddy bear—and I don't mean the pink silk ones—which dated from Theodore Roosevelt's time. And Mickey Mouse, in various forms, is only a few years past. But I can't seem to place the "billy doll." I wonder what it looked like.

Consecutive items in the noted Dahlonega Nugget:

"Col. Andrew Cain has been engaged in business in Atlanta for the past several days."

"Col. Andrew Cain, after an absence from town, returned Saturday night."

Sequel to the grand old gag about the fellow who had both legs cut off under a freight train and said "I can't kick."

"Man swallowed a teaspoon—and can't stir."

Do you know a good one?

New York columnist says everybody there is familiar with the inscription carved on the post of office building—about "neither snow nor rain—can stay these couriers." But, he says, few can quote it correctly.

All right, let's introduce a local bit. Thousands of you pass the Henry Grady monument at least once a week. Does he wear a hat or is he bareheaded? Don't phone. Telegraph.

BOYS TAKE NO PRIDE IN "PORTABLE" SHACKS

Editor Constitution: The plan of a coeducation arrangement for the Atlanta High schools recently put forth by Mr. McClatchey, of the board of education, is, I think, a perfectly splendid idea. I agree with Mr. McClatchey, that it may solve the problem of the ill-kept premises of Boys' and Tech High but it is not the only solution to the problem.

The trouble lies not in the "bad conduct" or "behavior" on the part of the students, but in the fact that they have to go to class in portables!

Is it reasonable or logical to believe that the students are going to have any pride in bleak gray buildings—with rooms so cold in the winter that they have to wear their coats in the classrooms and write in haste to throw paper on the ground in early fall and spring that they can't think straight? No, indeed not! They have no pride in the appearance of those portables, which, when clean, look like prison shacks, and it is, therefore, that they hate to go to school on the grounds or write filth on the toilet walls.

Now, concerning the cafeteria, about which so much furor was made a short time ago. Besides the fact that the boys have nothing in which to take pride in the way of a cafeteria, the building, so named, at Boys' High in particular, is entirely too small to feed 1,400 boys, too small and too poorly equipped.

The answer to all these problems stands staring the people of Atlanta in the face—give the students good buildings. Give them good, warm rooms in which to study; give them ample space for a bright cafeteria! Then watch the effect.

Immediately the boys would take pride in the appearance of the place, for they would have something worth taking pride in. I venture to say that no more paper would be thrown on the grounds, no more uneaten food would be pitched on the cafeteria floor and the writing on the toilet walls would be reduced greatly.

DAN BAILEY.

BOYS' HIGH PRINCIPAL DEFENDS TWO SCHOOLS

Editor Constitution: For some weeks now the senior high schools for boys—Boys' High school and Tech High school—have been the target of continued sniping on alleged "filthiness" in cafeteria and obscenity on walls.

The reiteration and playing up of these comments amount to a misrepresentation against which the faculty and the students of these schools deserve the uplifting of some voice in protest.

The unsatisfactory aspect of the cafeteria consisted of lunchroom floor littered with lunchroom wrappings dropped by students in a room so congested in standing room only that it was an inconvenience for waste is an inconvenience, if not a difficult problem. Young people who can relieve themselves of such encumbrance by dropping the same unobserved in the midst of a crowd are very liable to do so, in exactly the same way that any crowds in general will do on the street, in packed assemblies, in theaters, and in all places where crowds eat in haste and informally, or much refreshments while being entertained.

The debris on the floor of the lunchroom has always been regularly cleaned up immediately after the congested luncheon period ends.

Furthermore, the only place in 23 acres of grounds and buildings pointed out as exhibiting "obscenities" is an obscure toilet in a remote discarded building, used mainly for WPA recreational programs, thus open to assemblages other than our students, and very little used by the students of Boys' High and Tech High schools. In the regular much-frequented lavatories and is, no such defacement.

The staffs of these two schools consist of highly-trained, thoroughly experienced, conscientious gentlemen, who have served the city of Atlanta effectively for a long time, in a housing situation indescribably difficult to administer and to operate, who enjoy the respect and confidence of thousands of former and present students, and who demonstrate in the results accomplished that they know their business. The students, by virtue of the fact they are maintaining themselves in senior high school, must be regarded as a selected contingent of the youth of the community. The record of these schools, by any criterion—moral or intellectual—by which they may be judged, is consistently an over a long period of high and proud distinction.

Though there are regulations, administered and, when necessary, enforced in the operation of these institutions, we do not think of them in terms of "discipline," but rather in terms of regulation and cooperation. "Discipline" being a somewhat outmoded term and concept. In our regulations we maintain a flexibility designed to keep them adaptable to changes of circumstance. We regard ourselves as a live and potent organization preserving the confidence of the public and the courteous consideration and support of the press.

DROP MARRIAGE FEE FOR PAUPER COUPLES

Editor Constitution: I have thought for a long time that there should be a way to provide people with marriage licenses who are unable to pay the fixed fee. You would be surprised at the great number of white and colored people who desire to become married, but who really are unable to pay this fee.

I think that this class of people should be able to obtain a license by making an affidavit as to their financial condition.

However, the purpose of this letter is to thank your good offices for the very splendid editorial published in your editorial columns last week, which expressed my idea exactly, and I think it was fine of you to mention this in your valued columns.

Rene Clair Regains Vichy Citizenship

VICHY, France, March 3.—(AP) The citizenship and property of the late Norwegian government, was the Norwegian delegate to the League of Nations in 1935. In that year he wrote: "Here in Geneva we have every fear but the fear of God." Does anyone need to ask why the league failed? It was in the atmosphere of fear that the league succumbed in its attempt to create world peace. It forgot, or refused to recognize that there can be no peace apart from the will of God. Apparently, the world is again discovering that we can't get along without God.

Skepticism is distinguished by its ability to produce war, but it now confesses that it does not know how to manage a war, and it throws up its hands in utter impotence in the presence of achieving a lasting peace. Only as we turn to God, through Jesus Christ, "that strange Man hanging on the cross," can we know the peace that passeth understanding. It is in the secret of His presence that we come to know the peace for which our hearts forever yearn. With Herman Hagedorn, let us pray: "Lord, in this hour of tumult, Lord, in this night of fears, keep open, O keep open, my eyes, my mind, my ears."

Someone has well said, "God alone knows how hard we have tried to get along without Him—to go it as though we were wholly on our own in this business of living." We have witnessed the tragic result of an age of skepticism in which many sought to treat God indifferently. Dr. C. J. Hambro, premier of the late Norwegian government, was the Norwegian delegate to the League of Nations in 1935. In that year he wrote: "Here in Geneva we have every fear but the fear of God." Does anyone need to ask why the league failed? It was in the atmosphere of fear that the league succumbed in its attempt to create world peace. It forgot, or refused to recognize that there can be no peace apart from the will of God. Apparently, the world is again discovering that we can't get along without God.

Etheridge Asks Public To Shun Playing 'Bug'

New Grand Jury, Headed by T. J. Lyon, to Probe County Matters.

Warning that the lottery racket is on the increase, Judge Paul S. Etheridge Jr. yesterday called upon the public to stop playing the "bug" as a means of stamping out the racket and also urged the incoming grand jury to investigate the lottery business along with its required probe of all county affairs.

T. J. Lyon, retired printing company executive, was selected foreman of the new jury, and other officers are Jackson P. Dick, assistant foreman; B. S. Barker, of 1017 Columbia avenue, N. E., secretary, and W. M. Marr, Boy Scout executive, assistant secretary.

Pernicious Evil.

Judge Etheridge described lottery as a "pernicious evil" as he charged the jury as to its duty regarding gambling, and he warned the jury that its influence must be checked.

"The lottery racket would fade out of the picture quickly if the people would only stop playing the 'bug' the judge commented.

He directed the jury to investigate the lottery racket also during its two-month term.

"Men in high and low positions often take the stand in our courts and do not tell the truth," the judge asserted. "There is no surer way to break down the dispensing of justice than through perjury. I urged that you take action against any perjury cases which you can discover."

The January-February jury returned 16 true bills charging perjury in connection with testimony about strike disorders at the Atlanta hotel.

Foreman Lyon, who has served in that position on half a dozen juries here over a period of years, is to appoint a number of committee soon to probe every department and section of the county government. The March-April jury and the September-October jury are required by law to investigate the county.

'Lefties' Win in 5 Innings as Crackers Officially Open Drills

BY JACK TROY

Great Change ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., March 3. Baseball has undergone a startling change in the last 10 years. The game itself is no different. It still is 90 feet between the bases and the pitcher's box is 60 feet and 6 inches from home plate.

But there has been a great change in the conduct of the players. This may be because of the ever increasing number of young players in baseball camps, but whatever it is, the change is noticeable.

There is prima facie evidence of how sharply the game has swung to the milder side.

For instance, as one entered the lobby of the St. George hotel last Saturday night, there was a cry of "bingo." We ducked, which is the customary thing to do under the circumstances, but nothing happened. No one had thrown anything. It was on the level. They were really playing bingo in the lobby of the St. George hotel, and it was after 9 o'clock on Saturday night.

At one of the tables sat Sir Richard Niehaus, Cracker trainer; Jennings Poindexter, southpaw pitcher, and Ed Heusser, who pitches from the orthodox side.

Mrs. Heusser was just before winning the grand prize of the evening—a handsome lady's handbag.

Did Mr. Heusser blush as it was handed to him? No, he did not. He accepted it most graciously and took it home to Mrs. Heusser up the street.

In another part of the lobby, a group of elderly ladies were knitting by an open hearth. In their midst, chatting amiably, was Scout Dietrich, of the Atlanta club.

We tiptoed from the lobby and stood out in the cool wind, Bill Wilson and I. We hadn't registered but it would have been nothing short of rude to disturb the clerk, who was one of those going all out for that handsome bingo prize.

They Reformed One of the famous stories of training camps involving Atlanta teams had its origin in prohibition days—when the Crackers were training one year at Douglas, Ga. The late Johnny Dobbs was manager. Some of the scribes and photographers covering the camp pooled their assets and sent out into the country for some corn in a keg.

The idea was that they'd save it for a rainy day or use it in case of snake bites.

Anyway, it was put away in one of the rooms. One of the writers passed by the room soon after it had been stored. He noticed the door opened and glanced in. His astonished gaze fell on a couple of the fraternity kneeling by a bed, as in prayer. He walked quickly to his room near-by.

A little later he heard a gurgling sound and, curious, he walked back to the room.

The sight which met his eyes this time brought forth a yell of despair. Arm in arm, their eyes glistening, the pair was pouring the contents of the jug down the sink. They had got religion.

And when the writer screamed, "But what about my half?" All he got was a stony, aloof stare. The heathen.

Chicken Fancier Baseball players often engage in odd occupations in off season. Ed Heusser, for example, raises fighting chickens or gamecocks back in his home near Salt Lake City, Utah.

There was a main in Salt Lake the other day and Ed had 15 of his chickens entered. Eight wins for his tries was worth $250 plus twenty dollars on the side for every fight.

Heusser had a hard time keeping his mind on his game of golf—and maybe it is just as well he did for thinking about his chickens and wondering how they fared in the main at Salt Lake.

In 1939 with Memphis Heusser won 19 games and the Athletics bought him. He won six for the hapless A's last season.

The Crackers are counting on him being one of the top pitchers in the league this season, and with any kind of luck he probably will be.

POINTERS FROM POINDEXTER—One of the hardest workers in the Crackers' spring training quarters is Jennings Poindexter, the erstwhile eccentric southpaw who insists he has

CONNIE'S FOR KEEPS—Connie Ryan has second base well in hand on the first day of work in the Cracker camp yesterday. The Savannah graduate has been given first and second mortgages on the bag and he expects to hold on to it throughout the season. In addition, Ryan hopes to do his share of hitting.

Suggs, Hicks Top the Field At Augustine

Qualifying Opens Today in Florida East Coast Meet.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., March 3.—(AP)—Feminine club swimmers bombarded the fairways with practice shots today on the eve of the annual Florida East Coast Women's Golf tournament.

Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., winner of the South Atlantic at Ormond Beach last week, was a doubtful starter and Elizabeth Hicks, of Long Beach, Cal., and Louise Suggs, of Lithia Springs, Ga., took over the roles of favorites.

Other highly regarded contenders who got in practice licks today included Mary Agnes Wall, of Menominee, Mich., runner-up in the South Atlantic; Georgia Tainter, of Fargo, N. D., western junior champion, and Mrs. Lucille Robinson Mann, former western champion.

The qualifying round will be played tomorrow and match play will start Wednesday.

Hospital attendants reported that Mr. Gaither felt well enough to leave the hospital "very soon."

Joe Gordon Is Shifted To First by McCarthy

'Flash' To Replace Dahlgren, Leaving Second Base Duties to Rookie Gerald Priddy.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 3.—(UP)—Manager Joe McCarthy, of the New York Yankees, announced today that Joe (Flash) Gordon will be transferred from second to first base, succeeding Babe Dahlgren, as Gordon signed his 1941 contract for approximately $15,000.

Gordon's switch from second base, where he was a regular for two years, will make room for the sensational Kansas City rookie keystone sack combination of Shortstop Phil Rizzuto and Second Baseman Gerald Priddy. McCarthy said the veteran Red Rolfe will continue at third.

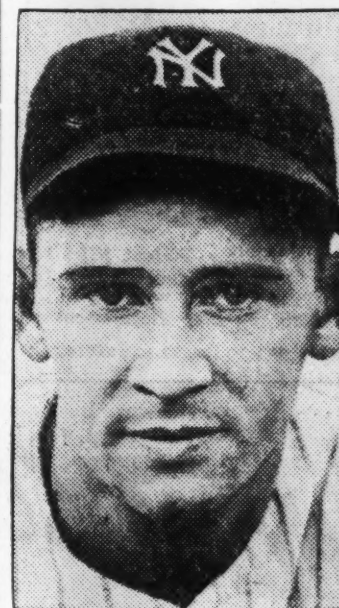

Dahlgren was sold to the Boston Bees last week and speculation was aroused as to whether he would be succeeded by Gordon, Rookie Phil Sturm from Kansas City or Outfielder Tom Henrich, or whether the Yankees would purchase an established first baseman like George McQuinn, of the Browns, or Jimmy Fox, of the Red Sox.

McCarthy announced today that no move would be made to purchase a new first baseman. Joe DiMaggio remained the only Yankee holdout.

Mercer Arrives For Dixie Tourney

JACKSON, Miss., March 3.—(AP)—Mercer University's Bears arrived today for the Dixie Conference basketball tournament, minus their coach, who will be along later, as plans were laid for the draw for positions tomorrow night.

Other squads expected tomorrow include Southwestern of Memphis, Loyola of New Orleans,

JOE GORDON.

Spring Hill of Mobile, Howard of Birmingham and University of Chattanooga.

They will be joined by Millsaps and Mississippi College, co-hosts to the contest which opens Wednesday afternoon for four days.

Squad To Play In Short Tilts On Sandy Field

Richards Hopes to Avoid Pulled Leg Muscles With New Plan.

By JACK TROY. Constitution Sports Editor. ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., March 3.—As a means of combating the sandy soil and avoiding pulled leg muscles, the Crackers have started off playing five-inning games.

Today the left-handers, led by Jennings Poindexter, defeated the right-handers, captained by Ed Heusser, 4 to 2. Poindexter hit a triple in behalf of the lefties' cause.

Everybody on the left-handers' side threw from the unorthodox side except Rookie Shortstop Jimmy Pette. Until the players' legs are accustomed to quick starts and stops, these five-inning games will be a regular camp feature. They will take the place of much of the running.

MANY YOUNGSTERS. The Crackers have a great number of young players in camp. Almost half of the ultimate squad of 40 did not have to register for the draft. The majority of these boys are great prospects.

The idea of the Crackers in getting the boys so young is so they can be taught fundamentals. Youngsters develop a lot faster when they are taught how to play the game properly in the beginning.

The Atlanta club is wasting its time training this squad of juveniles in the Fountain of Youth City. In such an adolescent atmosphere a fellow like Emil Mailho looks like an old man. Mailho, field captain, is helping train the kids. Here is an idea of the youth movement in the Cracker camp.

None of the following boys had to register for the draft:

Pitchers—Eugene Bearden, Earl McGowan, Elmer Flair, Elwood Lawson, John Kelly, Rene Cortes, Ulysses Waitany.

Catchers—Pat Bevell and Spec Dozier.

Outfielders—Willard Marshall, Thomas Robinson, Pete Thomassie.

Infielders—Connie Ryan, Jimmy Pette, John Kelly, Tommy O'Brien and Dan Seiler.

YOUTHS LOOK GOOD.

This is the best looking squad of youngsters the Crackers ever have taken to camp. And most of them will develop for future use. They're given extra work each day.

Manager Paul Richards had word today from Allyn Stout, veteran right-handed pitcher, that illness is delaying him in reporting. Stout lives in Webster Grove, Mo., and is due here the latter part of the week, according to his letter. The Crackers count him one of the ace pitchers.

Bob Chipman, up from Savannah, is suffering from undulant fever. It may interfere with his chances of making the club. The boy is off considerably in weight and has had a time of it. He is being treated by the club doctor.

With the exception of Stout, all the players due here early are on hand. And some who weren't due are here, too. Junior Marshall checked in today and will do some special exercises calculated to reduce his hips.

Sarazen Fires Eagle To Take 4-Ball Match

CORAL GABLES, Fla., March 3.—(AP)—Old Gene Sarazen, the golfing farmer from Brookfield, Conn., came up with another of his miraculous shots today—an eagle on the first extra hole—to send his team into the semi-finals of the Miami Biltmore's $5,000 International four-ball tournament.

His 30-foot putt for a three on the 500-yarder came in the nick of time, cutting off a great closing bid by the dark-horse aggregation of Leonard Dodson, of Springfield, Mo., and Willie Goggin, of Miami.

For most of the day Sarazen's young partner, serious Ben Hogan, of Purchase, N. Y., had carried the load.

Sarazen and Hogan had a medal score of 66-69 for the two rounds, compared to 68-67 for their opponents.

Canton Meets North Fulton in Finals

Greenies Rout Hapeville 42-16 In Semi-Finals

Decatur Bows Out After Leading Buckhead Five in 4th Period.

Canton's Greenies breezed into the finals of the N. G. I. C. tournament last night at Decatur and will be favored to annex the championship tonight in the finals when they clash with North Fulton's surprising Bulldogs.

The Greenies coasted to a 42-16 victory over Hapeville in the semi-finals, while North Fulton staged a fast finish to overcome the host team, 29-25, in a close battle that saw-sawed after the first quarter.

Two veteran guards, Roebuck and Tiffin, paced a Canton offensive that swept aside Hapeville with comparative ease. Tiffin scored 12 points and Roebuck had nine. Just a point behind was Manous, Greenie forward.

Kelly Mote and Colwell, with six and eight points, respectively, created what little attack the suburban Atlanta entry offered. Canton got away to an early lead and played most of the second half with substitutes.

The North Fulton-Decatur clash was anybody's game until the final minute. Led by Frank Broyles, the DeKalb outfit pulled up a 7-1 lead in the first quarter and appeared to be on their way to the finals before an active home crowd before the Buckhead five found the range.

Finally, with McIlwain and Harris hitting the bucket from the field, North Fulton went ahead only to lose the lead briefly in the fourth quarter. This was not for long, however, and a four-point margin showed Decatur behind for the night.

Broyles counted 13 points for the home side and Manget chimed with seven. McIlwain paced North Fulton with 12 and Harris, with eight, and Grove, with seven, were next in order.

The championship game will begin at 8 o'clock.

Celtics Defeat Eagles At Cleveland, 42 to 40

McDermott's Long Shot Wins Game as Final Gun Shoots; Champs Play All-Americans Here Thursday Night.

BY THAD HOLT, Constitution Staff Writer.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, March 3.—Eleven thousand fans were still groggy tonight from the Celtic-Detroit Eagle professional basketball game staged at the Cleveland municipal auditorium, and the storybook shot by Bobby McDermott which won for the New Yorkers, 42-40.

"Longest money shot seen in pro ball here in a decade," fans exclaimed on all sides after a game which produced three nifty fist fights and enough action to please Adolf Hitler.

McDermott dribbled the ball near the center of the court—he was standing in the center ring—looked one look at the timer who held his finger on the gun's trigger and let fly.

HIGH AND FAR. The ball sailed high and far. As it neared the basket the gun went off. It was curtains for the Eagles. The Celtic ace had made contact.

The ball slipped through the basket and it was a ball game. The pride of the Celtics and professional basketball had come through again with a shot that carried dollar signs all the way.

Atlanta fans are going to get a tremendous kick out of professional basketball Thursday night when McDermott meets Kautsky's All-Americans from Indianapolis at Warren Sports Arena.

In the pro game the referees give the game to the players. There is very little whistle blowing. If there is a fight between the players, it is the referee's punishment.

HE-MAN SPORT. Basketball, as the professionals play it, is a he-man sport. The fact that 11,000 fans paid to see this game is fair indication of that. It was homecoming for the Celtics, who formerly played in the American League as the "Cleveland Rosenblums." And their every effort was cheered to the rafters in the six-million-dollar auditorium, which seats 18,000.

The Celtics are clicking on all cylinders, but they'll need their best game of the year to hold off the All-Americans in Atlanta. The Indiana club has licked every big-time pro team in the land this season and will be out to replace the Celts as southern favorites.

Entries Close In Gold Medal Meet Tonight

Entries for the fourth annual Gold Medal tournament, sponsored by the Atlanta Basketball Federation, will close Tuesday at 5 p. m. Inasmuch as entries are restricted to teams which were members of Federation leagues, or played in leagues sponsored by an institution which was a member of the federation, many team rosters have already been turned in to officials of the federation.

The federation tournament committee, and other officers who have entries in their possession, will meet at the Y. M. C. A. at 7:30 p. m. Tuesday to check over the rosters, draw up pairings and prepare the schedules.

Three of the divisions in the tournament—Juniors, Boys and Midgets—will play afternoon games. The other four divisions—Girls, Class A Men, Class B Men and Class C Men—will play night games at the Fulton High court and the Y. M. C. A. Senior division contests will be scheduled starting Friday night, while Junior teams will go into action next Monday.

SHOUN SIGNS. ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 3.—(AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals' holdout list of five was reduced by one tonight—Pitcher Clyde Shoun signed his contract.

Sears Defeats Athens Plays Fitzhugh-Lee 2d Half, 30-23 On Wednesday

Championship Play-Off Necessary in Walthour Girls' League.

Jumping into an early lead and hanging onto it throughout, Sears' Red Elephants, 30 to 23, 1st night at Fulton High court to capture the second-half championship of the Walthour Girls' League.

The victory places the Greenies in the championship play-off with Sewell, who coasted through the first half without a setback. The game will probably be played on the pro show at Warren arena Thursday night.

"Helen Kirkland, Sears' captain, and Virginia Smith, her running mate at forward, proved too much of an obstacle for the Red Elephants to overcome. Kirkland registered 14 points and Smith poured in 15 for top scoring honors of the game. Eleanor Plaxico, who played a fine floor game, rounded out Sears' scoring with a foul toss.

Sara Killian, Sewell's ace forward, led her team with 13 points despite the fact she fouled out of the game with about three minutes to go. The return of Zee Hancock to guard for Sears was one of the main factors in the team's victory. She played a brilliant game under the Sewell basket, continually taking the rebounds despite the fact that all three of the opposing forwards towered over her.

The other two games resulted in victories for the Trojans and Walthour & Hood. Walthour tripped Miller Service, 35 to 16, with Fouts leading the way. The Trojans won on a forfeit from Lithuania and then trounced Hertz in a scrimmage contest, 19 to 14.

WAR NEARS NEW ZONE—As Germany's war machine overran Bulgaria yesterday, this portion of the Balkans loomed as World War II's newest trouble zone. The map shows rail lines and general topography of the region. Nazis were reported as far south as Melnik, Bulgaria, less than 100 miles from Salonika, Greece, and also to have reached Trigrad and Svilengrad. Greece and Turkey are said to be speeding border defenses and Turkey is rushing warships to the Dardanelles strait, which has been mined.

Moscow Flays Bulgarians for 'Appeasement'

said to be on the verge of joining the Axis as Bulgaria did. Yugoslavia offers an even more feasible route than Bulgaria for a German strike at Greece.

Communist and Fascist students fought in the streets of Sofia, Bulgaria. The Fascist, when attacked, were singing an old song, "Down With Yugoslavia," evidence of Bulgaria's old dream of a greater Bulgaria at the expense of Greece, Yugoslavia and Albania.

The United States legation in Sofia prepared two protests to the Bulgarian government.

1. Over the refusal of the Bulgarian military to allow United States Minister George H. Earle to cross into Yugoslavia Saturday.

2. Over the arrest of Boris Yaneff, a Bulgarian subject and an employee of the Chicago Daily News, who was taken from home Friday and remains inexplicably missing.

The legation expressed particular concern that the arresting officers were reported to have taken an American flag from Yaneff's home "as evidence."

It also was announced here that the secretary of the United States military attaché to Rumania, Colonel John P. Ratay, had been sent to concentration camp along with other Rumanian men and women with American and British connections.

Yugoslavia's Premier Cvetkov and Foreign Minister Aleksander Cincarmarkovic conferred at length with Prince Paul after the premier hastened to Belgrade by plane from his home province.

Authoritative quarters said the talks concerned the possibility of Yugoslavia's joining the Axis and some declared she was on the verge of signing up.

Five warplanes, identified as British, flew high over a corner of Yugoslavia, apparently en route to Rumania's oil fields.

There were unconfirmed reports yesterday that fleets of British bombers swooped in on Rumania's German-controlled Ploesti oil fields, causing explosions and huge fires. Germany's strict control of Rumania made confirmation of such reports almost impossible.

PROF CAR TAGGED. Hollywood's troubles never seem to end. Director Ted Reed was driving an old automobile through the city to a picture location where it was to be used in a pre-war film, when Traffic Officer Oscar McCullough issued a ticket against him. The charges were driving an unlicensed car, driving a car that constituted a menace and for impeding and threatening the traffic flow.

Blocking the Dardanelles to British ships would ease the way for any German thrust into Europe.

The newspaper Ikdam, often believed to speak for the Turkish foreign office, commented:

"At first, Bulgaria will not join Germany. Her army will have the duty of standing in front of the Turkish army, hiding the action of the German army which will be conducted against Greece."

"BULGARIA—Bulgaria, more than ever, loomed a great German camp—an encampment of men with somewhere else to go."

Field Marshal List, commander in chief of Hitler's Balkan armies, had moved his headquarters to Sofia. Seven divisions of Bulgaria's freshly mobilized army were massed at the Turkish frontier.

GREECE—Anthony Eden, Britain's touring foreign minister, and his traveling mate, General Dill, chief of the British imperial general staff, were in Athens, concerned over Greece's reaction to the presence of German forces on the Bulgarian frontier.

Greece appeared to have three courses: (1) Admit British imperial land forces in addition to the RAF, which has been helping her fight the Italians in Albania, (2) make the best possible quick peace with Italy under pressure of the German threat, or (3) continue the fight on the present basis.

The last was the thinnest of possibilities.

Plant Shippers Fight Abolition Of State Board

End of Entomology Work Would Cost $750,000, Crine Declares.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.
CAIRO, Ga., March 3.—R. V. Crine, who ships approximately 100 express carloads of tomato plants from Cairo each spring, today declared Georgia faces the loss of her $750,000 tomato plant industry if the Edwards bill (SB 73) abolishing the Department of Entomology is enacted into law.

Crine said he had been told the measure is scheduled for final consideration in the senate Tuesday morning.

Crine said out-of-state tomato plant buyers, almost without exception, have told him the abolition of the department and the transfer of the entomology work to the Department of Agriculture would subject the work to political influences in such a way that it would be practically without value, and that they therefore would be forced to withdraw from the state.

He said the tomato plant business is the only business paying its way in the entomology work, with contributions of about $13,000 annually, even though plant buyers say they are promised the service free in other states. They are willing to pay, but they do not want the work in Georgia placed in politics, he asserted.

J. B. Wight Jr., a local nurseryman and past president of the Georgia Nurserymen's Association, joined Crine in declaring enactment of the proposed measure "would inflict untold injury" upon the plant and nursery industries in the state.

Paul D. Fulwood, of Tifton, president of the Georgia Plant Growers' Association, was quoted here as saying the state's plant industry is 100 per cent opposed to the measure.

Tifton and Omega are other important plant shipping points.

The Fair Name Of Shakerag Again Periled

Judge Lucien Bell in Town With News From the Front.

The threat of involuntary incorporation still hangs over the otherwise happy community of Shakerag, in north Fulton county, Judge Lucien Bell, justice of the peace of the respected and honorable Shakerag district, came in to report yesterday.

While the residents of this oddly named section weren't watching very closely last year, a superior court order was obtained incorporating the ancient and well-beloved name of Shakerag to "Liberty Valley" Great was the wrath of Judge Bell and his friends and neighbors and the anger did not subside until it was discovered the law giving a superior court judge the right to incorporate a village had been long repealed and that Shakerag was still Shakerag and not "Liberty Valley."

Later, the emotions of loyal Shakeragians were roused again, because a petition was being circulated asking the legislature to incorporate the district (which lies partially in that county). This effort, too, was defeated and Shakerag remained free and unincorporated.

But now, Judge Lucien Bell, J. P., reports another threat has risen on the horizon. A petition to incorporate a part of Shakerag under some other name is being circulated and this time it calls for incorporating that part of the community which lies in Gwinnett county. Judge Bell and his cohorts have girded themselves once more to rally forth and do battle.

"Ninety-five per cent of us are as immune to this petition as swamp angels are from the bite of a mosquito," he observed succinctly. "We in Shakerag are cosmopolitan enough without being incorporated."

Justice of the Peace Bell then departed to continue the battle for freedom, 1941 Shakerag style. "We are proud of our name and we want to keep it," he muttered as he left.

Council Seeks To Defer Low-Cost Housing Work

City council yesterday sent to the tax committee a proposal asking the Atlanta Housing Authority to defer constructing any other low-cost housing projects. Atlanta until the city and federal authorities reach an agreement concerning payment for city services.

The council then authorized Mayor LeCraw to appoint a committee of three members, with himself as a member, to negotiate further. The issue arose last week when the United States Housing Authority said it was not willing to pay more than the $2 sanitary tax for each of the 5,000 units.

A little Want Ad in The Constitution does many a big job.

3,000 Applaud Models, Help British Relief

Debutantes Display Creations Before Throng Here.

More than a score of Atlanta debutantes last night wended their way slowly down the runway in Rich's Tea Room, displaying the latest fashion creations.

The display, under the auspices of the British War Relief Fund, brought out an attendance of more than 3,000 people, and considerably swelled the fund.

Matrons and young girls also participated in the show, giving Atlantans a gorgeous display that lasted for nearly two hours.

The relief fund committee originally planned to bring professional models from New York to exhibit the clothes, but came to the conclusion that Atlanta models could model as well as the professionals, and their decision proved to be a good one, judging from the applause of the audience.

Leaders of the Atlanta committee introduced on the program included Mrs. James D. Robinson Sr., Mrs. James L. Dickey, Miss Flora Wright, Mrs. Albert E. Thornton and Mrs. Daniel McDougald.

Dr. G. T. Brown Services Set Tomorrow

British Sweep Far Beyond Mogadiscio

Smash Through Guarded Mountain Pass Protecting Cheren.

CAIRO, Egypt, March 3.—(AP)—British imperialism, pursuing their cleanup in Italian Somaliland have struck on 80 miles northeast of Mogadiscio, along the coast of the Indian ocean to occupy Villaggio Duca degli Abruzzi, middle eastern headquarters announced today.

The town—literally the village of the Duke of Abruzzi—is on the rail route from Mogadiscio, the captured Somali capital and principal port, and is an agricultural center.

In Italian Eritrea, where the British were declared to have smashed through a guarded mountain pass protecting the strategically important town of Cheren, RAF bombers were said to have attacked the Fascist positions while South African fliers machine-gunned Italian gun emplacements and troop concentrations.

In Libya and Ethiopia, said the British command here, there was no change in the situation.

ROME ADMITS LOSS OF OASIS GARRISON

ROME, March 3.—(AP)—The Italians conceded today the loss of the garrison which had defended the Cufra oasis district of eastern Libya, and its capture apparently left the isolated fort of Giarabub as the last Fascist position in the Cirenaican desert.

Cufra's defenders, said the high command, had been under siege for a month and "facing renewed attacks by preponderant forces," were "overpowered by the enemy."

493 Blue Law Georgia Owe Violators Face 'Fair' $41,000 Court Charges For Building

Delaware House Condemns Enforcement of 200-Year-Old Statute

WILMINGTON, Del., March 3.—(AP)—While Delaware's court machinery staggered under the weight of hearings for 493 Sunday blue law violators, the state house unanimously passed a resolution today condemning wholesale enforcement of the law.

The house held that it "will not be coerced or told by any fellow officer or department what it shall do" and resolved it will "take its time" in deliberation on a bill to repeal the 200-year-old law.

At the same time, Attorney General James R. Morford, who yesterday directed an unprecedented number of arrests of persons "engaged in worldly employment on the Sabbath," asserted:

"Each Sunday will grow worse until the laws are amended."

In Wilmington, where 260 violators were summoned to court today, Judge Henry R. Isaacs ordered a rescheduling of cases, spreading them over a four-day period beginning Wednesday.

A bill to repeal the ancient laws has been passed by the senate, but was defeated in the house. This, maintains Morford, amounts to a "mandate for 100 per cent enforcement."

at the COURTHOUSE

Second trial of Herb Eidson, former deputy sheriff under indictment in Ku Klux Klan floggings, is scheduled to be held in Fulton superior court March 18. A mistrial resulted last month when he was first tried.

County commissioners will hold a special meeting at 10 o'clock this morning to consider legislation now pending in the general assembly which affects Fulton county. Particular study is to be given proposed amendments to county police and general pension laws.

Willie Drew Everett, young woman who was indicted on charges of larceny from the house, was acquitted yesterday by a jury in Judge Paul S. Etheridge's division of Fulton superior court. She was accused of taking clothing belonging to Mrs. Roy Tankersley, of a Georgia avenue address.

Council Balks On Authorizing Economy Study

Problem Finally Sent to Finance Group After Wrangle.

City council yesterday refused to authorize Mayor LeCraw to appoint a committee of citizens to recommend economies in local governmental costs, engaged in a lengthy wrangle as to whether or not it would ask the mayor to file specific recommendations to file municipal expense, and finally sent the matter to the finance committee.

Judson Warner, president of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, and Frank Carter, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, filed a formal communication requesting the designation of a citizens' group representing business, commercial, taxpaying and other interests, but it was filed without comment.

Resolution Offered.

Aldermen Ed A. Gilliam and Frank H. Reynolds and Councilmen J. Allen Couch and Frank Wilson then offered the resolution asking LeCraw to file his recommendations with council.

This precipitated a general council debate in which council members appeared somewhat confused as to whether or not the council itself "was on the spot" or "the mayor is on the spot."

Councilman George B. Lyle attacked the proposal, saying it probably "is a good paper, but I doubt that anyone could show the authors of this paper anything."

Gilliam Urges Move.

"Maybe it will put the mayor on the spot," Gilliam said after administration friends had attacked it from that angle, "but if anybody is on the spot now it seems to me that it is the 18 members of this council. I had no political motive in presenting this measure, and it ought to be passed."

Mayor Pro Tem, White surrendered the chair, to ask council not to "do anything hasty," but wait until after department heads report to the finance committee Friday afternoon on a questionnaire White sent them asking if they could operate their departments on less revenue, if personnel could be cut without curtailing services and if they believe the public is getting value received from the operations of their departments.

Councilman James E. Jackson attacked the proposal as a "move to put the mayor on the spot. If anybody wants the city investigated from the outside, I don't know what good an inside investigation will do."

Wilson's Attitude.

Councilman Wilson said even if the mayor reported and brought back recommendations "where the city could save $1,000 in 20 instances, I doubt we would do anything about it." He charged the city would save $20,000 this year in the purchase of new motor equipment for the police department.

Councilman J. Allen Couch said if anybody wants the city investigated he should run for office.

"I think we should first turn down some of the mayor's recommendations before we are criticized," he added. "I think I have voted for the last time for people voting outside Atlanta to make surveys and bring in a lot of recommendations."

Elimination Of Car Lines Strikes Snag

City Would Have To Assume Paving Costs, Mayor Learns.

Elimination of street car lines, regarded as important in speeding up the flow of traffic in Atlanta, yesterday was something of a problem to Mayor LeCraw.

City council passed resolutions authorizing the Georgia Power Company to abandon trolley lines on three routes and to substitute busses or trackless trolleys, but when the mayor began a study of the measures, he found that they would require the company of paving and maintenance costs heretofore assumed against the company on streets having tracks.

This means a loss of several thousand dollars a year to the municipal treasury and the city must take over complete maintenance of the streets, for which the company has paid about one-third as long as the thoroughfares were used by trolley cars.

LeCraw has asked for information as to the city's losses and probably will attempt to work out some agreement with company officials. In the meantime, he is holding the resolutions to revise services on his desk.

The council yesterday adopted several minor traffic law changes on recommendation of the traffic committee. Two new stop sign intersections were authorized. One set of stops will be on Elliott street at Foundry, and another on Hilliard street at Irwin street. The north side of Glenn street from Murphy to Stewart avenues was made nonparking in another ordinance.

Patrol Probing Thefts of Cattle

A special crew of State Highway Patrolmen, "specializing in catching chickens and cats thieves," has been in operation since Governor Talmadge went into office, it was disclosed yesterday, and is the first venture of the patrol into law enforcement other than traffic cases.

The crew, in two units, is now attempting to break up two rings of cattle thieves in south Georgia.

Headquarters of the patrol in Atlanta said, although no arrests for either chicken or cattle stealing have yet been made.

Governor Talmadge yesterday urged anyone plagued by such thefts to get in touch with the highway patrol.

He also advised motorists to "write to me if the patrolmen are impolite or arrest too quickly."

Young Child Needs Dental Examination

Editor's Note: This is the ninth of a series of authoritative articles on modern dentistry as it affects every man, woman and child in Georgia, approved and released by the Georgia Dental Association.

Baby teeth are just as important to the young child as regards growth and development as the permanent teeth are to the older child and adult.

As soon as the full set of baby teeth have erupted, usually from 2-2 to 3 years, the child should be taken to the dentist for a thorough dental examination. Thereafter, a visit should be made to the dentist every six months. Children whose teeth are very susceptible to decay should visit the dentist every three or four months.

Usually, the 3-year-old child has little wrong with his teeth; so little, in fact, that most dental operations can be performed painlessly. It is logical to take the child to the dentist early; that is, before long, discomforting operations become necessary. This will prevent fear of the dental office and future dental operations and thus will enable the dentist to make friends with the child.

The dentist will examine the child's teeth and remove any stains or spots that may be on them. He will correct any small defects that may be present by removing the decay and inserting a small permanent filling.

If necessary, the dentist will take X-ray pictures of the child's teeth to make sure that no decayed spots on the tooth surfaces have been overlooked.

Sometimes, in spite of the best of care, one or more of the baby teeth become so badly decayed that they must be extracted. When this occurs, the dentist can insert a space maintainer to prevent the other teeth from drifting out of line and thus help to preserve the natural shape of the jaws.

One of the parents should accompany the child to the dental office so that the dentist and the parent can plan the child's dental program until such time as the child is capable of planning for himself. The dentist can instruct both the parent and the child regarding diet and the home care of the mouth.

Older members of the family should never plant the idea of fear in the child's mind. He should be taught that the dentist is his friend. Then, whenever the child requires the services of the dentist, he will accept such services of the dentist without fear and apprehension.

MY DAY: Franklin Jr. Sits For Sculptress

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, Sunday.—A perfectly delightful thing happened to me the other day, but I have been so pressed for space that I haven't told you many of the things which I should like to tell you. However, this I must tell you:

Young Viennese friend of mine, Charlotte Kraus, a singer, in collaboration with a friend of hers, Madame Rona, a Czechoslovakian sculptress, induced my son, Franklin Jr., to sit for a head which will belong to me after Madame Rona's exhibition. I am perfectly delighted to have it. In a curious way, this head showed me certain things about my son which I had not noticed before. He looks older, and yet from the right profile the childish resemblance is still strong.

My youngest son, John, and his wife came home from their cruise on Thursday, having had a splendid time on the first holiday they have spent together in some time. I was glad to be able to turn over to them a healthy baby, who had acquired several teeth during their departure and had learned really to crawl.

John and Ann brought to my attention a child's book, "Timothy Taylor, Ambassador of Good Will," by Helen Husted. I think that many adults, as well as children, will enjoy this story in verse of a little boy whose father made him feel that coming to the United States during the war, was really being an ambassador who made friends for his country in a period when friends were much needed.

Friday, in the midst of our snowstorm I drove up to Howard University to see the exhibition of paintings by Negro artists of Chicago. It was like a fairy world outside, and the young students coming across the campus, battling with the wind and snow, were a gay group. Inside the paintings were almost entirely reminiscent of gay colors and summer scenes.

One little ceramic by Edward T. Collier is the loveliest shade of green I have ever seen, and one or two of Joseph's A. Kersey's sculptures are extremely interesting. I am always fond of water colors and would have liked to walk away with some that were on exhibition.

Friday night I dined with members of the Federal Bar Association. While I felt they were very kind to invite me, I also felt very hesitant about inflicting any words on such an important group. I was very glad to have the opportunity, however, to hear two extremely interesting and able speeches from Mr. Robert Patterson, assistant secretary of war, and Mr. Francis Biddle, the solicitor general.

Serve Dish As Climax Of Dinner

By Sally Saver.

One of the oldest and happiest dining customs in the world is that of serving a cheese tray, either as the climax of a great dinner or as the principal refreshment for an afternoon or evening party. The cheese tray is a simple yet sophisticated custom, a symbol of open-hearted hospitality in many parts of the world.

The whole point of the cheese tray is the wide variety it can offer. Some people like cheese mild; some like them sharp. Some like hard cheeses; some like soft ones, so in the preparation of a cheese tray, thoughtful hostesses provide a selection of several types.

On the tray pictured are assorted cheeses including wedges of the popular American cheese and Roquefort, squares of Swiss without "eyes" and discs of a soft creamy cheese. Beaten biscuits, small hot biscuits, fruit bread, or thin slices of brown bread are served with the cheese, and cold drinks, hot tea or coffee are most acceptable accompaniment. An excellent recipe for tiny fruit muffins good with assorted cheese tray is as follows:

Orange Muffins
1-4 cup butter (or margarine)
1-3 cup sugar
1 egg
1-2 cups cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1-4 cup evaporated milk, undiluted

1-4 cup orange juice
Grated rind of 1 orange
Cream the butter and sugar, add egg and beat well; add milk, orange juice and grated orange rind, then flour and baking powder sifted together. Bake in muffin tins 20 minutes in moderately hot oven (375 F.). The batter may be stored in refrigerator several hours before baking.

Other appetizers that go nicely on the cheese tray are the various small cocktail crackers, crisp and tasty, rusk, potato chips and wholeheart wafers. Toast strips and toast rounds may be spread with cheese, or spread dried beef with a soft cheese and roll up, or take stuffed olives cut in half crosswise and put together with cream cheese.

Questions about recipes, food and service will be answered by Sally Saver. Call WA. 6565 or write her in care of The Constitution.

Small Doses Of Medicine Taken Today

By Dr. William Brady.

Grandpa was fond of telling how, when he was a young feller, it was his invariable custom to take a teaspoonful of castor oil whenever he was out of kilter and in a few hours he would be as good as ever. We must allow a liberal discount by way of poetic license, and settle for approximately a tablespoonful, I suspect. At that, Grandpa was a sissy compared with father. Many a time I've seen father calmly down his daily two teaspoonfuls of nice white washed and baked sand, without a chaser of any description. Father's theory was that birds and animals eat more or less sand and it keeps their digestion in good order; he seemed to thrive on it, though ultimately he succumbed to sarcoma of the abdominal wall—I have no idea whether his sand eating had anything to do with that.

Mrs. L. K. C. writes that her husband and she have been taking two grains of quinine sulphate three times a day for three months, as prophylaxis against respiratory infections. In spite of the recent flu epidemic and the fact that her husband's business takes him out on log rafts and occasionally he falls into the cold waters of the Columbia, the family has been free from cri all winter. She says they are convinced that so-called "colds" are caused by infection and not by cold weather or wet feet.

Since the children, one 5 and the other 2½, had cri early in the fall, she has been giving them each a daily half teaspoonful of a liquid called coco-quinine, as they like this and objected to quinine in tablets or capsules. That represents approximately 2 grains of quinine a day, which is a fair prophylactic dose for young children. The children have remained exceptionally well through the winter and they spend considerable time playing out of doors every day.

Then Mrs. C. recalls that her maternal parents, who settled in northern California in 1882 and raised a family of 12 children, regarded that part of the country as malarial at that time and kept a bowl of quinine always on the table and ate it by the spoonful after meals. They all enjoyed the best of health and Mrs. C. never heard of any illness among them.

In those days probably quinine powder came, as it comes now, in wide mouth vials or jars which lend themselves admirably to transmutation into bowls, as the years roll by and the tale is told by successive generations. But spoons were not too plentiful and no doubt if we could trace the genesis of the story it would become manifest that the old folks took a good pinch of quinine from the jar on the table, perhaps after dinner nearly every day. That would be enough to prevent malaria, and it would be only extravagance to eat the stuff by the spoonful even if there were spoons available.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Family Formulary. I have often wondered why you don't collect all of your own excellent recipes or formulas and such others as you approve for use in the home and publish them in a kind of family medicine list or handbook—I know you ridicule the old time "doctor book," but I believe this thing I suggest would be of inestimable service.

W. A. L. Answer—Nearly half of the booklet "The Medicine Cupboard" is devoted to the Family Formulary. For copy send 25 cents and 1-cent stamped envelope bearing your address.

Here's the redheaded Susan Hayward, who out-Scarletts Scarlett in her role in Columbia's "Adam Had Four Sons."

Susan Hayward Out-Scarletts Scarlett

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, March 3.—"No one likes to be reminded that she failed." The speaker is red-headed Susan Hayward. She has just been asked to attend a publicity lunch for all the "Scarletts" in Hollywood who failed to get the role in "Gone With the Wind."

"Besides," she adds, "I'd feel so phoney." All of which should give you the idea that the 22-year-old ex-model from Brooklyn was a will of her own. 2. Sound common sense, and 3. A determination to make the Hollywood grade without the aid of usual and unusual publicity stunts. Miss Hayward came to Hollywood three years ago to test for the Scarlett role. She will shortly be on view in her first really important film role ("Adam Had Four Sons") in which, by one of those coincidences, she out-Scarletts Scarlett. She is the vicious, heartless "Hester" in "Legacy," the title of the best seller from which the movie is adapted. Much water has flowed beneath Miss Hayward's movie bridge between the first test and the latter concrete fact.

Before David Selznick saw Susan's pretty face in a national weekly magazine, she was called Edythe Marrener and earned her bread and jam as a commercial photographer's model. "I was under contract to Selznick for the duration of my test—about three months," she tells me. Then Selznick said he was sorry, but he had to test 20 other girls for the role.

An agent obtained for her a contract at Warners, who changed her name, but did nothing else for her. "I felt quite guilty taking the salary." (She won't say me—did you see the picture? I how much.) It must have been a sizable sum, because Susan promptly rented a large house in Beverly Hills and wired for her mother, brother and sister to join her. Then her six months were up, and Warners were also very sorry, but—

"What did you do then?" I asked Susan over a luxurious lunch at Victor Hugo's. "I starved, but never for longer than three days at a time," she replies. There was the big house to get rid of. There were her sister and brother out of work. And there was a dog that liked to eat. The entire family moved to a small bungalow and hoped things would get better. They didn't. "We couldn't pay the rent, and one day some one called and said, 'Are you Miss Hayward?' 'Yes,' I said eagerly, and she put in my hand a disposition notice. First time I'd seen one of them. They're cute. We refused to budge."

Who said it was always the darkest hour before dawn? Two weeks later Miss Hayward was hired by Paramount. "First thing I resolved was—no more big houses in Beverly Hills." After that the gal naturally wanted to do a spot of work. "I'd like to earn my salary," she told her Paramount bosses, who smiled gently, and told her to be patient. Things started to move.

"I had three pictures for Paramount," Susan says. "Our Leading Citizen" with Bob Burns—a flop. The top feminine role in "Beau Geste" with Gary Cooper and Ray Milland. I can't tell you how excited I was when they told me—did you see the picture? I was the one you didn't see while you were asking the woman in front to remove her hat! Then I had a small part in some Martha Raye picture." After this, a long rest period broken by the usual personal-appearance tours.

Susan was still under contract to Paramount, and when she returned to Hollywood, there followed another 10 months of idleness on the pay roll. "I used frequently to see Mr. Freeman (her Paramount boss) and say, 'Can't I please do something to earn my money?' But he, too, would advise patience. If it hadn't been for Gregory Ratoff, that is what she would still be practicing—patience on pay."

"Two years ago I was taken to tea at Mr. Ratoff's house," says Susan. "We talked for a while, then he said, 'Excuse me a minute.' He came back with a huge box of candy. 'Not for you,' he said, 'give it to your mother, because she brought you up to be such a good girl.' A couple of months ago he sent for me to test for 'Hester'—a bad girl—in 'Adam Had Four Sons' ('Legacy')—and he liked it—thank heavens!"

In spite of, or because of her difficult time in Hollywood, Miss Hayward likes the place. "It's thrilling to be in an industry that's so uncertain," she says. "And I like it here because it rains a lot (don't show this to the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce)." ... She is not the athletic type, although her figure looks good in a swimming suit. She likes to sleep until around 12 in the morning. ... Regarding a husband she says, "I guarantee I'll be choosy."

MONTHLY PAIN

Delightfully Relieved by New SPECIAL PRESCRIPTION

Do you suffer monthly from cramping pains due to functional causes? Here at last is a safe prescription especially made for you. Written by a physician for his own women patients, they praised it so much that it is now offered to all women. It is called Tempo, and comes in tablet form in two sizes, 20c and 40c.

Tempo tablets do far more than merely relieve pain. They soothe the nervous irritability and promote relaxation. They are proving a blessing to many women unable to find relief by using remedies meant for general use. They contain no opiates. Originally women paid the physician five dollars to get this prescription. Now you can get the same thing in Tempo tablets for only 20c or 40c. At all good druggists.—(adv.)

Sally Forth SAYS

Prominent Visitors To Add Luster to Events This Week

... SOCIETY IS PREENING its best feathers in preparation for the advent of several eminent visitors who will be here to speak before various important organizations and for whom numerous informal social affairs are being planned. The visiting personalities, all of whom are exceptionally interesting, include Mr. and Mrs. James A. M. Marjoribanks, who hail from England and are in residence at Jacksonville, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ellis Roberts, of London, England, who are wintering in Marshallville, Ga., and Brantz Mayor, of New York City.

Mr. and Mrs. Marjoribanks, who will arrive this evening, are an exceedingly attractive young couple, according to Atlantans who already have had the pleasure of meeting them. Mr. Marjoribanks (whose name is pronounced Marshbanks, by the way) is well known in this country as one of his Majesty's British consuls.

Mr. Roberts is an outstanding author, critic, journalist and radio announcer. He is a vice president of the P. E. N., a fellow of the Royal Society of Artists, a fellow and member of the Royal Society of Literature, and lists among his personal friends such noted persons as the Archbishop of Canterbury and Sir Arthur Quigley-Couch. He recently lectured at the University of the South, in Suwanee, Tenn., and at the University of Georgia.

Sunday evening, Mr. Roberts will lecture on "Your England and My America" at the March meeting of the English-Speaking Union at 8 o'clock at the Piedmont Driving Club. Mr. Marjoribanks will be a special guest at this meeting, which will be open to the public for a small admission fee.

Mr. and Mrs. Roberts, incidentally, claim Kate Edwards, Atlanta's noted artist, as one of the close friends. She has visited them at their home in England and did the charming illustrations for a book of children's stories written by Mrs. Roberts.

Mr. Mayor, who is assistant to Henry Luce, publisher of Time magazine, and who has been in Washington, D. C., for the past six months making a study of national defense for Time, Inc., will arrive in the city tomorrow to speak at the luncheon-meeting of the Atlanta Advertising Club at 12:30 o'clock at the Piedmont hotel. Mr. Marjoribanks will also be a special guest on this occasion.

Later in the afternoon, Mr. Mayor and Mr. and Mrs. Marjoribanks will share honors at a cocktail party at 5:30 o'clock at the Piedmont Driving Club. The guest list will be limited to the officers and directors of the Atlanta Advertising Club and their wives. Tomorrow evening Mr. Marjoribanks has been invited to be present at the meeting of the Burns Club.

Members of the British War Relief Society, Inc., will honor Mr. Marjoribanks at a luncheon Friday, and that afternoon he and Mrs. Marjoribanks will be complimented at the tea to be given by Mrs. Dolloff de Welles at her home on Baltimore place. The following evening Mrs. Stephen Ives will give a small dinner party for Mr. and Mrs. Marjoribanks.

Climaxing the series of social events will be the buffet supper to be given Sunday evening by Mrs. Edward Worcester at her home on Andrews drive for Mr. and Mrs. Marjoribanks and Mr. and Mrs. Roberts. The party will precede the meeting of the English-Speaking Union and the guests will be limited to a dozen friends of the hostess.

... ONE HUNDRED SEVENTY-FIVE members of the school set received in their mail during the weekend charming invitations in the shape of gaily decorated hat boxes. Tied with red ribbons and caught with clusters of flowers, the boxes bore, in addition to the addresses, notations in red indicating that the folders were invitations.

The attractive invitations were issued by May Haverty and Corinne Carpenter for a dance which will take place next Friday evening at the Sara Rogers Studio at Buckhead. The affair will celebrate both of their birthdays, for Corinne was 12 years old on March 1, and May will be 12 on March 11. Their guests will include their fellow members of the Wednesday Dancing Club, in addition to other members of the school set.

The lovely young hostesses will be assisted in entertaining by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Carpenter and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Haverty; their small sisters, Mildred Carpenter and Margaret Haverty, and Mrs. Evans Joseph and Doris Perryman. An interesting program of events has been planned, and numerous prizes to be awarded. There will be a Paul Jones, a conga chain, and many exhibition dances.

Last Saturday Corinne entertained at a spend-the-night party at her home on Pine Valley road, also in celebration of her birthday, her guests including May, Anne Arkwright, Betty Hitz, Barbara Hirsch and Winifred Shackelford. Supper was served buffet style and afterwards Corinne and her guests attended a movie. On their return home, they raided the ice box, true college girl fashion for a midnight supper.

The party was climaxed by a waffle breakfast on Sunday morning.

... THE MONTH of June holds especial significance for a popular belle, who will become a bride after her graduation from a well-known college in Virginia.

The bride-elect, who is a petite and vivacious brunette, has two brothers and a sister. Her fiancé, who has been her constant escort for the past several years, has recently been called to the Army and is stationed in Florida. He was an attendant at the recent marriage of the bride-elect's sister.

Though the pretty bride-to-be received her ring last month, the formal announcement of the couple's engagement will not be made known until next month. Can you name them?

... LAST EVENING when the final act of the beautiful fashion show staged for the British War Relief Society was ended, Ann Pappenheimer, one of the lovely models, dashed to Candler Field, where she boarded the southbound plane for Miami. Once in the Florida city, Ann will join Julian and Katherine Murphy Riley and the trio will fly to Nassau for a vacation trip.

Julian and Katherine preceded Ann to Florida and enjoyed the gay winter playground before making plans for Nassau. After a two weeks' stay, the trio will return via the east coast of Florida and will stop at the Ponte Vedra Club, Ponte Vedra Beach, for a few days before proceeding to Atlanta by motor.

Jean Tells Stone She Loves Sayre. Eastman Agrees To Work With Stone

SYNOPSIS. Jean Selden, in love with Brandon Sayre, an explorer, is dazed by Vivian Forrest's wealth and ardent love-making. She makes no secret of her love for him, but tolerates him because of her baby, Florine. Sayre comes to a house party at palatial Forrest Hall, on Long Island, and Jean knows she still loves him. Other guests are Anne Fraser, a movie actress, and Peter Haskell, a writer. Vivian's half-brother, Austin, is practicing for a fencing tournament when Vivian invites Emerald Fane, a pretty movie actress, ordering that Florine's choice nursery rooms be turned over to her. He tells Jean that Emme is to be a permanent member of the household. He insists upon a daily 15-minute fencing practice with Jean, who also is an expert. After she leaves one night after fencing with Vivian, he then he falls dead. There is a small foil wound on the neck but authorities, who question Jean closely, seem to think death was caused by morphine. Vivian had left a letter with a lawyer named Campbell, stating that he hid his last will in his study but a long search is fruitless. Emme says she holds Vivian's promissory note for $500,000, but when she opens a safe deposit box there is only a piece of blank paper. Austin tells Jean he loves her; she says she will marry Sayre, a famous detective, finds the will, giving Jean the bulk of the estate. In a letter in her work-basket, Austin tells her Vivian should have left him more. Stone agrees to help solve the murder mystery. Now go on with the story:

INSTALLMENT XXX.
"You don't put it quite right, Mr. Stone," Jean answered. "Our 15 minutes was up; we should have stopped fencing then, anyway. I could not be sure that he was going to fall; he had often pretended to fall, just to tease me. And there were several people with him. Had he been ill or hurt, they could call me."

"And they did call you."
"Yes—after he was dead. I wanted them to lift him up, but Austin said we must not do that."
"He was right. Then what did you do?"

"I was sort of—not dazed—I think I mean what they call bemused. I was quite myself, but the sight of Vivian dead—I can't explain it. I was like one in a trance, living over our first days together. I seemed to love him again, all his later unkindness and cruelty seemed to fade away."

"Oh—then Anne Fraser wanted me to go back to bed, and Mr. Sayre said, no, I must wait for the doctor. I sat on the sofa and first thing I knew, Emme came flying over to me, and put her head in my lap and cried and went on like a crazy thing, and said—"

"Said what?"
"Oh, a lot of babble about Vivian being so dear to both of us, and that he belonged to both of us—you understand, Mr. Stone—that was not pleasant for me to hear."

"I do, indeed, understand. Now, Mrs. Forrest, could Miss Fane have murdered your husband?"
Jean said at him: "Why, Mr. Stone," she said, "Emme was very much in love with Vivian—she wouldn't have killed him!"

"Never mind that—could she have committed the murder?"
"Why, I suppose she could—I don't know—"

"She had no fencing foil in her hand?"
"Oh, no; but it is not thought that Vivian died from a foil thrust."

"You surprise me. I thought, he did."

"You must ask Mr. Eastman about that; he's the police inspector. As I understand it, Vivian was poisoned with morphine."

"Yes, I must have a talk with the police. Eventually, Mrs. Forrest, you will marry Mr. Sayre?"

"I will tell you the truth. I do expect to marry him. But I will ask you not to tell that. I was engaged to Brandon Sayre before I ever saw Vivian."

"And you preferred Mr. Forrest?"

"I was dazzled by his whirlwind wooing and by his position and wealth. I was a young and foolish girl, an orphan and poor. I am not making apologies. I thought Mr. Forrest the better match, and I married him."

"Whereupon Mr. Sayre became an explorer in distant lands?"

"He did go to far countries, but I have not said it was because of my refusal to marry him."

"And you need not say so; it is none of my business. And if Sayre couldn't hold you, he deserved to lose you. Now, I have heard of a certain thrust or play or whatever the right term is, which you and Mr. Forrest both learned in Paris. I am not a fencer, but I have heard it is a difficult trick and you were both expert at it. Is that what you were practicing that night?"

"Among other things, yes. The thrust you speak of is not so very difficult, when both fencers understand it. Mr. Forrest and I had practiced it many times and we were both adept at it. Monsieur Isaby, from whom we learned it, was here a few days ago, and he told me that Vivian and I were his prize pupils and that we were both masters of that thrust."

"We will talk again, Mrs. Forrest. I must go now."

Stone went away and Jean sat alone, thinking, for a long time. Inspector Eastman had come to the Forrest house with a feeling of scorn for the "smarty-cat" detective. He had a secret desire to put the know-it-all upstairs Fleming Stone in his place.

But a very few minutes in Stone's presence changed Eastman's belligerent attitude to a real feeling of comradeship. The inspector saw at once that Stone was not the conceited prig he had turned out to be.

He had heard about Stone's finding the will, and while he considered it a clever piece of work, he did not propose to praise it unduly. To his surprise, Stone turned aside the slight recognition Eastman was prepared to make.

"I think, Inspector," Stone said, "that what we are after is the murderer. Have you any definite suspicions?"

"I have not, Mr. Stone. You see, it has not as yet been decided what caused Forrest's death."

"So I understood. You're awaiting a further report of the autopsy, I suppose."

"Yes; and as you may or may not know, Dr. Peterson, the medical examiner, and I differ on what to deduce from the knowledge we already have."

"Are you willing to tell me about it?"

"I am glad to. Perhaps you can advise us. You see, it is a long established fact that in a case of death from morphine poisoning, pupils of the victim's eyes show a tightly contracted condition; they are reduced to mere pin points. But after Mr. Forrest's death, his eyes showed normal sized pupils, so it seems to me that morphine could not have been the fatal agent."

"If the medical authorities declare for morphine as the cause of the death, we can only turn our attention to who gave the morphine to Forrest, and how."

"Yes, I quite agree. Miss Fane tried to tell me that she saw someone giving Forrest something, but when I asked her for details, she shut up like a clam and said she didn't mean it, that she was only joking. Now, from her manner, I believe she did see something that the rest of us do not know about, and I wonder if you could get it out of her."

"She is a strange proposition, that girl," Stone said, thoughtfully. "I'll see what I can do, but she doesn't mind trifling with the truth."

"I know that—and yet, somehow, I can't help a sort of admiration for her."

"That's because of her beauty. If she didn't exaggerate nature's gifts to her, she would be a wonderfully lovely girl. As to her looks, I mean. She is far from lovely in my mind."

"Do you know, I rather like her," Eastman admitted, and Stone dropped the subject.

"I am going to see Monsieur Isaby," he told the inspector. "I'd rather you wouldn't say anything to anyone about it, for I may learn nothing from him. But I mean to try to find out something more about that fencing thrust. It sounds a bit mysterious to me, and I don't like what I don't understand."

"Very well, Mr. Stone. I'll not tell where you've gone. Perhaps when you get back you'll see what you can find out from Miss Fane."

"I will. But morphine couldn't have been given to him while he was fencing."

In the meantime, Austin had been with Jean in her boudoir. He had begun by telling her of his great love for her, which he had bravely tried to hide as long as she was his brother's wife. But now Vivian was gone, and he could tell her of his devotion.

Jean took a chaffing attitude. She told him she was not really his guiding star, as he had declared, for Emme considered herself that.

"Emme!" he exclaimed, scornfully. "That little bunch of bad temper and cosmetics!"

Jean had to smile, for it was an apt description.

"What's she staying here for?" he growled. "Can't you send her away?"

"The police won't let her go yet, as you know. Now, Austin, please leave me. I've a lot to do, and—"

"I know. That young person in the nursery is calling you. But, seriously, Jean dear, I am here for a little talk."

"Make it snappy, then, for I want to be left alone. It's about money, I suppose."

"Yes, it is," he said, shortly. "And it ought to come from you, not from me. You know, of course, that Vivian fully intended to make another will."

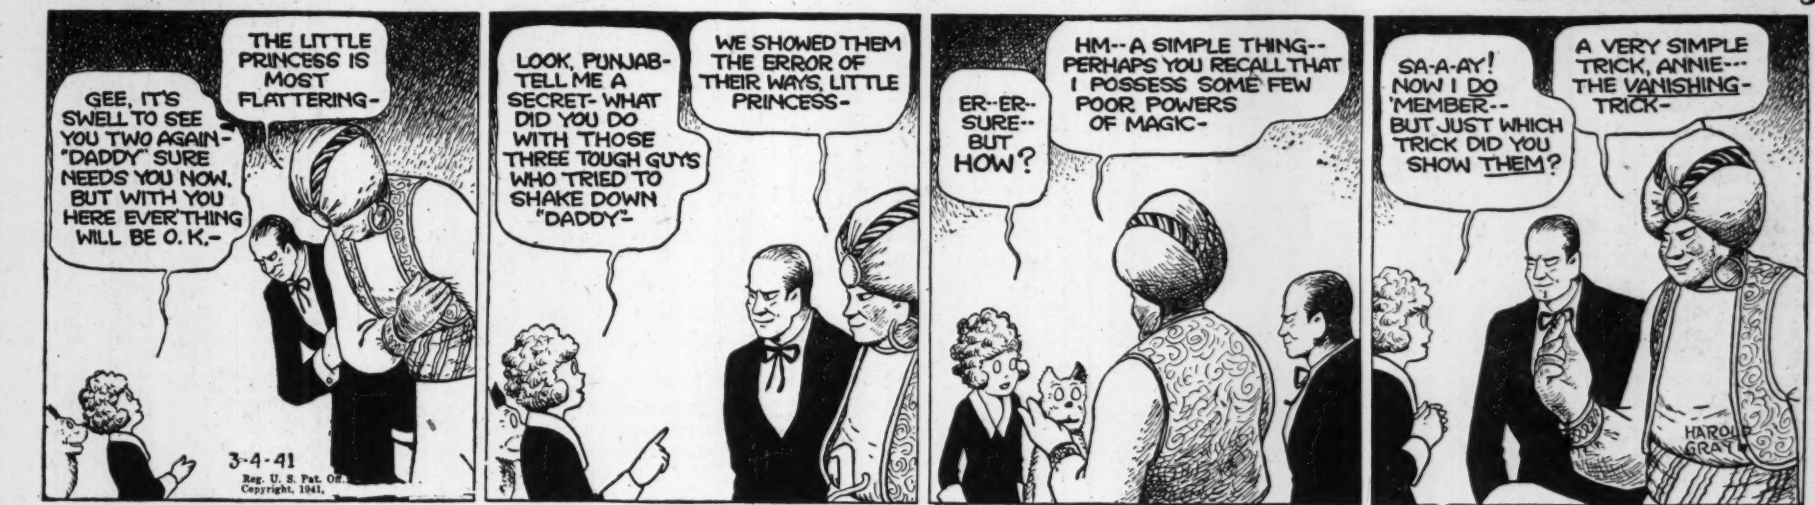

"I know Vivian intended to do a great many things that he never did do."

Descriptions of New Weapons Used Today

By Capt. Gene Morgan.

"Will you describe some of the new weapons with which the American infantry is being modernized and fitted to cope with machinery such as has been recently introduced on European battlefields?"

One of the new weapons assigned to American infantry is the 37 millimeter antitank gun. This is a rubber-tired high-speed model developed in 1939 by the Army. The gun is intended for point-blank firing at an ideal range of 1,000 yards. At that range its projectile, which weighs 1.92 pounds, will penetrate 1-1/2 inches of armor plate. The solid steel projectile is capped with an aluminum alloy nose, which shatters upon impact and prevents the shell from ricocheting from a tank's armor plate. The .50 caliber machinegun is not exactly new, having been introduced as anti-aircraft weapon in the 1920's. However, its use has been greatly extended and it is now in the category of infantry weapons for use against tanks and other mechanized units. This gun fires armor-piercing shells weighing 3-10 of a pound at the rate of 400 to 500 a minute. It is said to penetrate 3-4 inches of steel at 1,000 yards.

The weapon is intended for harassing tank crews until the 37 mm. gun can open fire. The new 81 mm. mortar is a high-angle weapon, used to drop shells on enemy targets like aerial bombs. It has a range of from 100 to 3,200 yards. It fires four types of shells, including a gas shell. Weighing only 136 pounds, it can quickly be set up almost anywhere during action. There is also a lighter 60 mm. mortar. New-type shells fitted with fins like aerial bombs are fed to the mortars—dropped down the barrel after the gun is aimed, and the propelling charge is ignited by a firing pin in the base of the shell.

Manufacturers Of State Will Stand Defense

Industrialists To Assemble Here Tomorrow for Clinic.

The problems of total preparedness—for today and tomorrow—will be discussed by Georgia manufacturers and executives at the state's first "defense clinic" tomorrow at the Ansley hotel.

Sponsored by the Cotton Manufacturers' Association, the Associated Industries of Georgia, and the National Association of Manufacturers, the meeting is expected to attract industrialists from every part of the state.

Topics for discussion will include a study of the results of a recently completed survey of Georgia's potential defense production facilities, and a review of the possible effects of the world situation on "tomorrow's" American institutions.

Attendance at the meeting is expected to approach 500 businessmen, Norman E. Elsas, president of the Associated Industries of Georgia, reported yesterday.

Elsas and J. A. Miller, president of the Cotton Manufacturers' Association of Georgia, are co-chairmen of the meeting.

The young man is about to go back to the city when he gets his first patient—exasperating, puzzling and almost insulting, but nevertheless—a patient.

STRANGE TALES—Guests with strange stories to tell will have an opportunity to relate them when they are the guests of Gabriel Heatter on the "We, the People" program to be heard over WGST tonight at 8 o'clock.

Magnesium Is Placed Under Priority System
WASHINGTON, March 3.—(AP) The Office of Production Management placed magnesium under a mandatory priority system today. Officials said the step subjected the metal to the same controls imposed February 24 on aluminum and machine tools.

Top price of 11 cents a pound for mixed aluminum scrap sold by airplane manufacturers was fixed by the Defense Commission.

Wave of Dixie Art Work Seen By Grant Wood

Paintings To Follow Literary Successes, He Predicts.

By LEE FUHRMAN.

The public can best encourage art by giving struggling artists appreciation—and a square meal now and then, Grant Wood, distinguished painter of the American scene, said here last night. He gave a lecture at the Piedmont Driving Club under auspices of the Atlanta Art Association and the High Museum of Art.

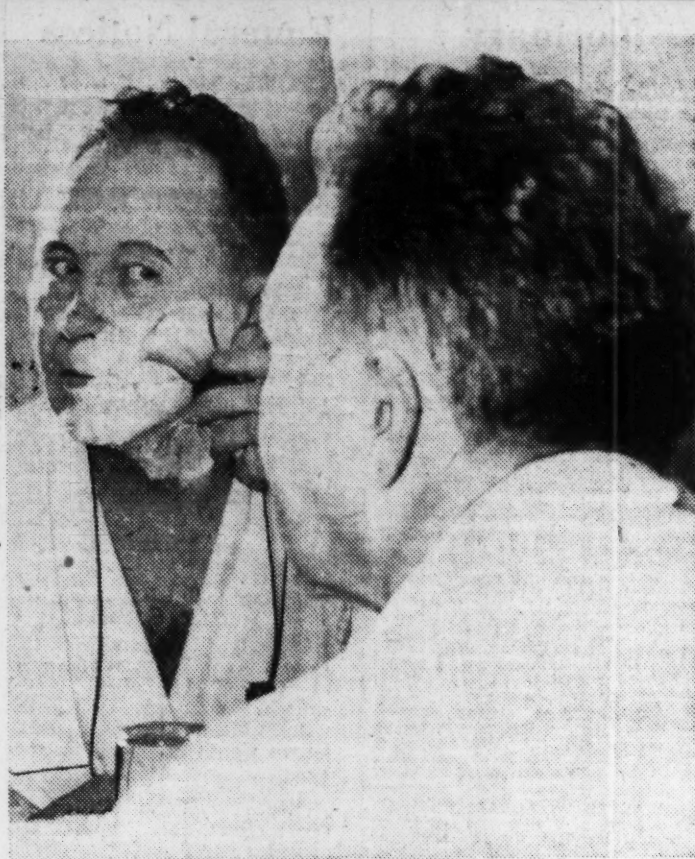

"I am convinced there is a great wave of southern painting coming on. I have many students from the south and have seen a great deal of talent among them," he said.

"It is a fact that an upsurge of painting follows an upsurge of writing in a region and you in the south have had such a burst of contemporary writing that I feel sure the burst of painting will follow shortly."

"Just as Sinclair Lewis' 'Main Street' and 'Babbitt' opened the middle west for the painter, so in the south your contemporary writers will open the way for southern artists."

As for some of the starkly realistic writing—such as "Tobacco Road"—Wood pointed out that for a time many persons in the middle west objected to Sinclair Lewis' "holding the mirror up to nature," but that a more tolerant attitude has come with the passage of time.

"The public can help the artist a great deal simply by treating him well as he comes along. I don't say this in any condescending sense—far from it—but the world doesn't look half so grim to a painter if he has a square meal under his belt. Give him a pat on the back—and a good dinner now and then."

As for the future, Wood said: "Hemmed in as we are by war and destruction, we need a strong art more urgently than ever before. We need painters who can get beyond the galleries—to the hearts of the people. We need constructive artists who can build up the morale of the nation and affirm steadfastly that when this storm is over all will be well."

Wood in appearance is of middle height, with light hair and extremely light blue eyes. He is soft-spoken, courteous and gentle in manner.

Nazis Promise Re-Creation Salonika for Of Wilson War Yugoslav Aid Board Sought

Use Greek Port as Lure To Swing Belgrade Into Axis Fold.

BELGRADE, March 3.—(UP)—Germany has asked Yugoslavia to "declare herself unequivocally" on the side of the Axis, with an implied promise that Greek Salonika may be given to Yugoslavia in a post-war division of spoils, it was reported tonight.

Quarters close to the Axis, predicting that Yugoslavia will follow low neighboring Bulgaria into the Axis fold, said that the Belgrade government's move probably would be a matter of weeks rather than days.

German diplomatic activity in Belgrade, intensified during the weekend, was said to be concentrating on this formula involving a Yugoslav declaration supporting the Axis tripartite alliance, but deferring to a later date the nation's formal adherence to the pact.

An "unequivocal" Yugoslav declaration of support for Germany and Italy, the Germans were reported to have pointed out in their "invitation," would not only guarantee Yugoslavia's territorial status, but might also give Salonika and an Aegean outlet to the Yugoslavs.

"FREE FRENCH"

VICHY, France, March 3.—(AP) An extensive "Free French" recruiting organization in occupied France was reported yesterday by the Bordeaux newspaper Petit Gironde, which told of the execution of one enlisting agent.

New Army Shutdown Stirs Patterson To Ask for Unit.

By The Associated Press. A suggestion for re-creation of World War strike-prevention machinery came from a high War Department official yesterday as a strike of craftsmen developed at an Army construction project employing 15,000.

"There should be no strikes and no stoppages," Robert Patterson, Undersecretary of War, told the House Judiciary Committee. He had related that there were work stoppages last week due to labor disputes in 23 plants producing for the Army. As a result, he said, 120,000 "man-days" of work were lost.

Asks War Board. Patterson proposed establishment of a group similar to the 12-man War Labor Board organized by President Wilson in 1918. This board was composed of five labor, five industry, and two public representatives.

Its antistrike activities were based on conciliation and voluntary compliance by labor and management with its suggestions. President Wilson established it by executive order, and Patterson said he thought this was preferable to strike-control measures instituted by legislation.

The Undersecretary of War said there had been fewer delays to production due to labor disputes in 1940 than in 1939, but was emphatic that work stoppages must be eliminated for the duration of the "emergency."

Officials Concerned. Those which have occurred, he said, "cause as much concern to us as do threatened shortages in basic metals."

The scene of the new strike that developed yesterday was Camp Davis, N. C., where an antiaircraft firing range is being built. The strike was called by AFL craftsmen to back up a demand for a preferential shop under which union men would have first call on job vacancies.

L. H. Rouse, business agent for the Wilmington (N. C.) Building Trades Council, said 5,000 workers decided on the walkout. About 15,000, including many who are unskilled and non-union, are employed on the $15,000,000 project.

Cool-Off Time Called. At Lansing, Mich., the state mediation board ordered that a 30-day "cooling off period" should intervene between the notice of intent to strike filed last week by the United Automobile Workers-CIO and any cessation of operations in the Ford Motor Company plant in the Detroit area.

Under Michigan law such a period must intervene where a cessation of work would be "against the public welfare." The Ford company has approximately $150,000,000 in defense orders.

At Kenosha, Wis., officials of the Simmons Company declared there was no change in the stand of either the management or union despite discussions during the week end of AFL wage and vacation demands.

About 12,000 workers are employed in plants at Kansas City, San Francisco, Seattle, Atlanta, Kenosha, Watertown, Mass., and Elizabeth, N. J.

Martin Is Indicted On Murder Charge

Charles E. Martin Jr., accused of the knife slaying of his pretty young wife in Kirkwood last month, was indicted yesterday by a DeKalb grand jury on a murder charge and will face trial probably next Monday, Assistant Solicitor Dave Ansley said.

First trial on the criminal docket, beginning next Monday, will be the case of Frank Dupree, accused of killing a salesman in DeKalb several months ago.

The grand jury, meeting yesterday, also passed a resolution condemning the building of additions to the Atlanta city prison farm. A restraining order against the building was denied last month by Judge James C. Davis, but privilege to give citizens in vicinity of the farm to seek limitation of the use of new buildings.

High Court Rejects McIntyre Appeal

The United States supreme court yesterday refused to review the Georgia conviction of Sam McIntyre, of Atlanta, who has been sentenced to 12 months on charges of operating a numbers game.

McIntyre's attorney, George Finch, said that the appeal was based on the contention that arresting officers held the lottery operator by force while they obtained evidence from his person. In the petition to the supreme court, McIntyre held this was an illegal search and seizure.

The case previously was before the Georgia supreme court, which upheld the conviction made in the Fulton criminal court. In McIntyre's petition, it was also maintained that the Georgia constitution establishing the criminal court provides for only five jurors and that this is illegal.

OFF GOES OUR COAT

THE work ticket for Buick in the national defense program has been written.

The special task assigned to us now is the volume production under license of Pratt & Whitney valve-in-head airplane engines.

A complete key organization of first-string production men is set up and "all-out" on the job.

They are backed by the hard-bitten technical proficiency, the skill and experience and production "savvy" of our whole organization.

Already the land is bought, plans are complete and work has begun on a vast new 1,000,000 sq. ft. plant specially designed for this complex undertaking.

Necessary dies and tools are being designed and developed and when in place 10,000 additional Buick men will be at work in this vital engine-building task.

It will take time, of course, to get the needed machinery, install it and "make ready" for volume production.

In the meantime, we are continuing to produce the best automobiles we know how.

So you will get your Buicks—the Best Buicks Yet—as long as this squares with national safety; whenever it doesn't—well, we know that with you as with us, the big idea is America first!
